Students seek cooling relief from record summer heat

Whether it was tubing down the Salt River, braving the waves at Big Surf or swimming in the nearest pool, many students were having fun keeping cool in the 110 degree heat.

Other teenagers retreated to air conditioned summer school classrooms or were busy earning money at a summer job.

Appointments were made and haircuts received in preparation for having senior yearbook portraits taken.

Some students didn't stay in Tempe for the summer. They took family vacations, traveled to foreign countries or participated in various camps.

Summer employment is common among students such as Carol Pottorf, junior.

Long waiting lines to receive class schedules and I.D.'s demand patience of students the first day of school.

Frosh elect, clubs form as autumn season begins

As the intense heat of the summer slowly faded, taking with it hard earned tans, students tried to get used to wearing shoes again. Some fought withdrawal from the soap operas they were so loyal to during the summer months. Others simply tried to cope with getting up early and going to school.

The varsity football team played the Orange and Yellow game and entered into their regular season while other fall sports got under way. Swimming, volleyball, cross country and freshman teams also began their competitive seasons.

The freshmen held their class election and the new officers were initiated into student council.

Music filled the school grounds as the band practiced early every weekday morning. They rehearsed routines with the flag and pom-poms getting ready for their upcoming marching season.

The fall activities peaked with Homecoming and all the events warmed up to it.

Activities heat up students as winter's cold takes over

The diminished space on school buses as thick coats began to appear was the one sure sign that winter had finally come. Some students from areas north or east of Arizona argued that coats aren't even needed here. But despite the real temperature, the winter seemed to heat up with activity.

Candy and food sales by clubs were in full swing while the yearbook staff was in the thick of their deadlines. The Ski Club was busy planning their annual trip for Christmas break.

Holiday music concerts, basketball games, semester exams, Connotation and a new semester kept most students occupied during the winter months.

Spring rains help flowers bloom as students find love

"School's almost over!" was a thought on nearly everyone's mind as the excitement over the approaching summer vacation mounted.

"Senioritis" was at its worst but when the actual graduation ceremony rolled around, thoughts of freedom turned to sadness that they were leaving.

End of the year banquets were held, last minute prom details were checked out and teachers prepared for the flood of final exams.

As the weather warmed up, so did romance. Couples too shy to peak up before grew bolder as the school year ended.

Making pyramids is not just for Egyptians, as the Aztec cheerleaders prove at the pep assembly.

From the first day of school to graduation night, weeks filled with activities marked this season as far from boring. There was always something going on.

At pep assemblies, the excitement and shouts built until all that could be heard was the roar of "Aztecs! Aztecs!

Aztecs!" Yells for the individual classes shook the gym as well when the competitive spirit of students and pride in their class shone.

Athletic events drew large crowds of rowdie students to cheer the Aztecs on to victory. Those who didn't go out with friends after could attend the dance that usually followed the game.

Strange creatures roamed the halls on Halloween dress up day. Other costume days occurred throughout the year providing students with the perfect opportunity to dress and act a little weird.

If students had the Monday morning "blahs" at the beginning of the week, it wasn't evident by Friday. Excitement built all week long as students planned and anticipated their weekend activities.

Getting out of the student parking lot after school proved to be an activity in itself. Between friends meeting there to talk about the day or what to do that night and those students anxious to get to their destinations, the parking lot was a classic example of total confusion. Honking, yelling and engines revving all added to the atmosphere.

Start of school year brings annual welcome, orientation

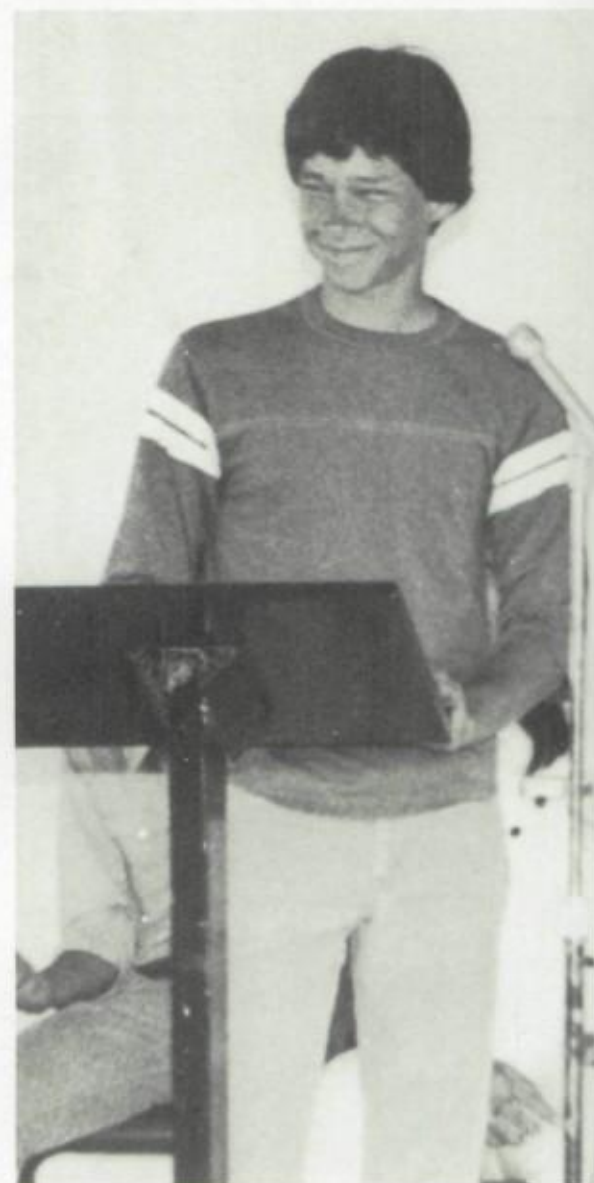

On the first day of school over 1500 students, including 428 nervous freshmen, filed into the big gym for the traditional first day welcome delivered by Eldon Mailes, principal.

The beginning of the school year also brought the usual first month activities including freshman orientation and elections, the opening of football season and the first pep assembly.

At the first home football game, played against Nogales, Haskell Henshaw Stadium was dedicated. Henshaw, long time district athletic director, was presented with a plaque dedicating the stadium to him.

Seniors build float, choose royal couple "Memories" was selected as the theme for the second annual homecoming week.

The week's activities included dress-up days, competitions at lunch such as a limbo contest, the senior walk, homecoming game and dance, and the selection of royalty.

Twenty-two outstanding seniors participated in the senior walk. Of these, five couples were nominated by seniors as attendants. Finally one couple of these five was chosen as the Homecoming King and Queen by a voting of the seniors.

Glenn Dennard and Katy Boyer were selected as king and queen. Senior attendants were; Kim Nash, Sandy Parker, Debbie Fuhrman, Tomi Wilson, Mark Ryan, Scott Shill, Bobby Candelaria and Mike Taylor.

The homecoming game was played against Gerard. The Aztecs won the game 53-2.

Video game parlors attract many students

All it takes is a quarter, and you can become a space hero, a race car driver or a frog.

It used to be that students would pack pinball arcades on the weekends for their enjoyments, but over the past few years most of that has changed and now they go to video game parlors.

The reason for the popularity in video games is partly due to the public's interest in science fiction, according to Bob Radez, co-owner of Starship Fantasy, a popular arcade among students.

"I think that the science fiction interest definitely has a lot to do with the interest in video games," Radez said.

According to Bill McAdoo, manager of Aladdin's Castle, most of the monitors have turned to color screens and voice synthesizers.

As with everything, there is always a way to improve the video games.

"The manufacturers realize the potential that is here and have realized the interest that has been created in these machines. They are dumping money into research and development of these games to continue to come out with better and better games," Radez said.

The versatility and challenge is what attracts many young people to these games.

"It is not a crazy little ball running around," McAdoo said. "You put yourself in your own position and there is no set way of playing it."

"Video games are faster and more action packed. It is a cheap form of entertainment," he said.

According to Kirk Johnson, senior, he thinks video games are more realistic than pinball. "The manufacturers kind of add a fantasy to them," he said.

"Video games are more exciting and are a lot better than hitting a little silver ball with two flippers," said Keith McCrea, junior.

McCrea said video games are more "realistic and challenging" and offer more of a wide spread selection as compared to pinball games.

Some students keep to the traditional form of arcade fun.

"I play pinball," said John Nesti, sophomore. "I have never played video games because the machine eats quarters at first and the action is not exciting enough. You just do the same thing."

No matter what individual students think of them, there is no denying video games are a big success.

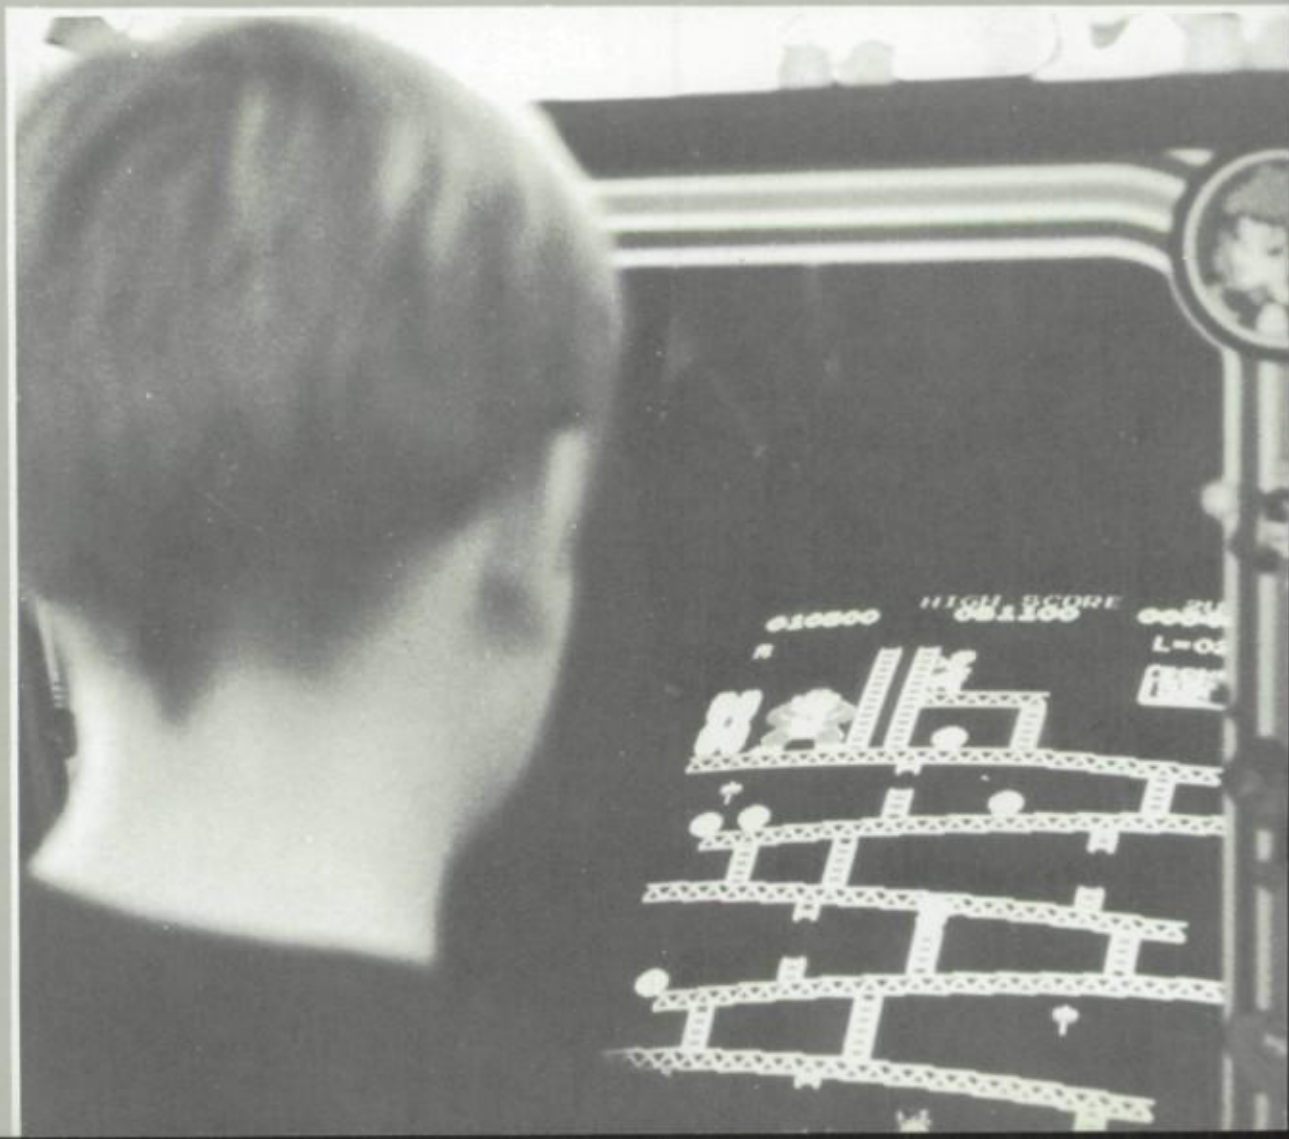

Students not only find the games in arcades, but can find them in businesses ranging from the corner store to the restaurant down the street.

"Video games have universal appeal," Radez said. "They are as greatly accepted in Europe and in the Far East as they are here. They have a broad range of age appeal."

"Because of technology, ten years from now the whole face of the industry will be changed. It will be even more exciting," he added.

Christmas season brings Santa's visit

A visit from Santa and his elves, courtesy of the Corona Community Club, prepared students for Christmas. The club arranged for students to be able to have their pictures taken with jolly ol' St. Nick himself.

The choir and band held their traditional Christmas performance on December 10 at McClintock's Boyle Auditorium.

The Christmas season also proved to be a time for sales. Candy, Christmas stockings, Santa-grams, linen towel calendars, pickles and popcorn were only some of the items sold during December.

Several resignations way for the rehiring of teachers cut in last year's district wide reduction in force. Also, 13 new teachers were hired.

Academic programs were not affected in these cuts but one of this year's goals of the board of education was to study possible changes in next year's curriculum for budget reasons.

One investment that was made was that of a Centralized Xerox machine to take the place of the process of dittoing all handouts.

Though these changes had some effect on students and teachers, some things remained the same.

Teachers still prepared for their classes. Planning and grading assignments was a very time consuming process as some had as many as four or five classes to prepare for.

Some students tried to juggle homework, jobs and club activities and come out on top. Other students had problems battling the urge to just stay in bed.

Many students and teachers, though, enjoyed their responsibilities. This was evident in the enthusiasm that they showed.

School board experiences name change

The name of the school board was changed this year to governing board, according to state law.

Dr. John Waters, superintendent served as the chief administrator for the Tempe Union High School District. He was also responsible for organizing governing board meetings.

The district administration included Dudley Stringer, business manager; Bill Cox, personnel director and Jim Love, assistant superintendent. Don Wilkenson was the new athletic director. Wilkenson took the place of Haskell Henshaw, who retired last year.

William Boyle served as president of the governing board and Mrs. Mary Francis Lewis was the vice-president. Clerk of the board was Mrs. Virginia Tinsley. Other board members were Robert Kempton and Dr. Richard Smith.

Department adds second year biology course as elective

Advanced biology was the only class added to the science department this year. It was a second year biology class taught by Mike Trimble. The first semester of the class dealt with field oriented subjects while the second semester dealt with anatomy and physiology.

The advanced biology, honors chem-physics and honors physics classes went to Williams Air Force Base. Advanced biology also took field trips to the Water and Cotton Research Lab, Four Peaks and elsewhere.

Each student has to do an independent research project which was ecology related. Some topics studied were moss, trees, and microbiology.

Department adds two classes to curriculum

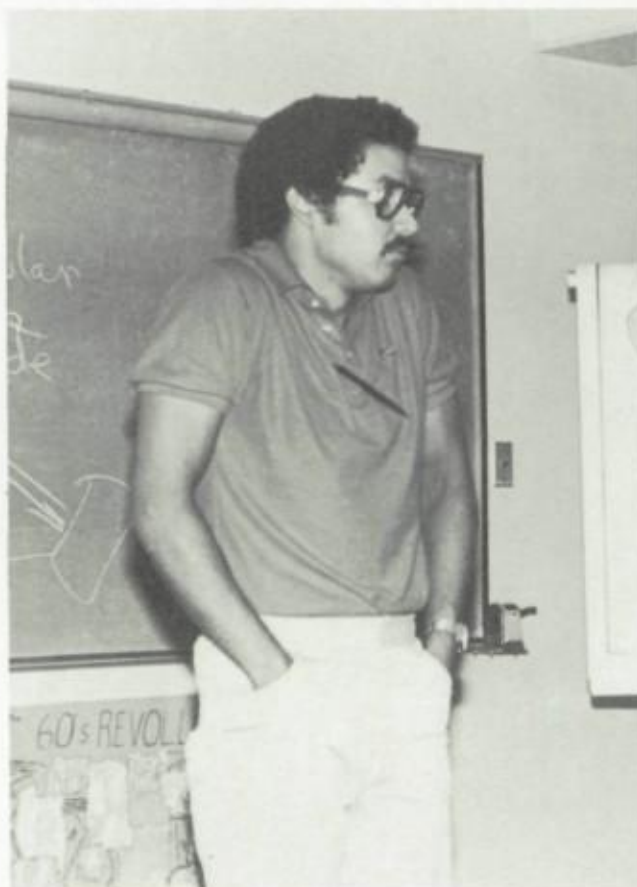

Two new classes were added to the social studies department this year, criminal justice, and sociology.

Criminal justice is open to juniors and seniors. It deals with the justice system.

Sociology deals with today's society problems and life styles.

A new teacher was added to the department, Mr. Steve Adolf. Adolf took the place of Mr. Chris Murray and teaches American history and government.

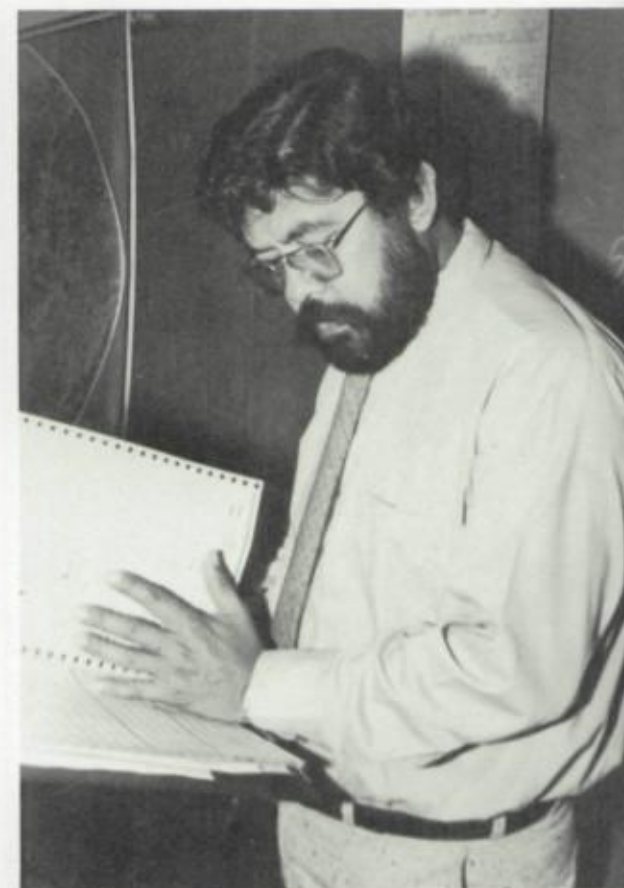

In the department there were field trips for sociology, criminal justice, and world geography classes. Guest speakers also appeared in free enterprise, American history, criminal justice, and sociology.

Schools make use of computers

Computers are quickly becoming a common tool in the educational process of our schools. It was estimated that more computers were installed in schools in 1981 than in the previous decade, according to Business Week Magazine. Right now computers are used in the math, science and journalism departments of Corona.

"It is a board objective to work towards every student in the Tempe High School District to develop an awareness of computer technology," said James Love, assistant superintendent. In the district office there is a model PDPL70 mini-computer that all four Tempe high schools have access to.

This is the third year that computers have been in use at Corona, according to Eldon Mailes, principal.

"The program has been very successful in the teaching of programming and computer literacy," Mailes said.

Math department chairman Duane Levi has used computers in his algebra and calculus classes and is in the process of developing material to incorporate computers into all algebra classes. Levi also teaches a computer programming class in which students learn how to program computers.

According to Levi, learning to operate a computer is like learning a foreign language.

During the first year, a student may have trouble but as he gains experience it gets easier. The class also gives students a good background in operating computers that will be beneficial as they move on to college or business, Levi said.

This year the journalism class began using a computer in the production of the "Sunrise." The computer allows the staff to set their own type which was previously done by the printer.

According to Bob Muller, advisor, the computer provides several advantages.

Setting their own type allows the paper an extra week to gather news which makes the paper more current. It also saves the paper a considerable amount of money in printing charges. The computer also makes the study of journalism more realistic since most of the newspapers in the country are already using computers in production.

"The computer helps to modernize instruction, to keep pace with what's happening in society," Muller said.

Science department chairman Wayne Williams started to use a computer in his science classes this year. According to Williams, a computer is useful in three main ways in teaching science. First, it can be used as a tutoring device to help students who need to make up work or want to work at a faster pace than the class. Second, the computer also provides practice and can drill students in science related topics. And third, the computer can simulate conditions for experiments that are unable to be created in a typical lab. Williams also records grades on the computer which allows the students to keep track of their grades during the grading period.

Williams has submitted a proposal to try to acquire several microcomputers for use in the science department but has had trouble in attaining the funds for the project. Williams feels that many people think of computers as a game rather than a very useful educational tool. "I think that within the next four or five years computer literacy will be a required course," Williams said.

"The guidance department is always trying to improve itself, by increasing information on military careers and providing information about colleges and universities throughout the country," said Dale Akers, department chairman.

Akers said the department likes to have college representatives visit the campus and have the students talk to them and ask questions about their colleges. Vocational representatives also visit the campus and give classroom lectures and their programs such as electronics or drafting.

The department added another counselor, Mrs. Letha Barrett.

Other changes included the increased use of the Individual Career Plan (I.C.P.) for each student to help establish long range goals as they go through high school.

"In my opinion many students would do better in high school if they saw a reason for learning certain things and how that learning would benefit them in the future," Akers said.

Counselors like Lola Randall are available to students such as Eric Paskell for guidance.

Secretaries operate office with efficiency

Although most of the responsibility for running the office is often accredited to the principals, the majority of office duties were performed by the secretaries.

Cindy McMannon had the large responsibility of being the principal's secretary. Kay Parker and JoAnn Brockman were secretaries to the assistant principal—registrar and assistant principal—activities/athletics, respectively.

Bert Rodriguez and Fran Robertson were in charge of the attendance office. They had their hands full adjusting to the new attendance policies.

Kay Clay was responsible for transcripts and records and Bobbie Lee was the secretary for the guidance office.

Library requires I.D. to check out books

Because of the increased enrollment, I.D. cards were used to check out books this year, according to Rosalee Spaulding, head librarian.

"Now that Corona is heading toward 1,600 students, it is impossible to know everyone," she said. "The reason for the I.D. cards was that other people used other kids' names."

Also the library added a xerox machine this year, which is located in the audio-visual area in the library.

Besides selling school text books, the bookstore, managed by Peggy Stewart, sells other items.

"We sell a few school supplies. We help clubs out by selling anything they have to sell for fundraisers," Stewart said.

During the busy times of the year the bookstore hires students, just like any other business.

"The bookstore is a great place to work," according to Stewart, "to get business training, more contact with people and learn about accounting."

Walkie-talkies make security guards' job easier, quicker

The rising cost of help, long lines, expensive food, and student complaints were among many problems faced by the cafeteria this year.

Because of federal cutbacks, the cafeteria had to raise the price of the component lunch from 90 cents to a dollar.

Walkie-talkies were used by the security guards this year. The guards requested them after Marcos de Niza high school started using them last year.

"The purpose of the walkie-talkies is mainly to save time for students, staff and security guards," said James Christensen.

Another change in security this year was the addition of Bobby Garcia who replaced Bill Carlos. Garcia took the job because he likes working with kids.

Crew helps maintain grounds, equipment

A five year plan to improve the school is slowly winding down to a halt, with just a few more odd jobs left to do, according to Hal Wickham, plant foreman.

"The five year plan is capital improvements for the school," Wickham said. "We have most of our projects completed, but we're going to get more landscaping in," he added.

Improvements were put in last year, according to Wickham when the outdoor basketball and volleyball courts were added.

Wickham's job includes buildings and grounds, and Tom Martin is in charge of heating and air conditioning.

Since the school population is reaching the 1600 mark, most of the classrooms are open, Wickham said.

Wickham had 15 people working for him, nine in the day and six more taking over at 2:00 p.m. for the night shift.

Besides cleaning the school grounds, maintenance also helps the athletic department by setting up for games.

The pressure to live up to their reputation was really on the athletes and coaches after being named the best all around AA school in 1981.

State titles in football, boys basketball, girls basketball, boys tennis and chess had been won that year and students expected that it would happen again. Anything short of a win was met with extreme disappointment and the attitude that the Aztecs would surely do better next time. They would have to. This was Corona's last year as a AA school.

Sports

Most athletes dealt with this pressure by channeling their energy into practices but there were still those occasional mistakes on the field or court.

Another aspect of sports was the individuals who pursued sports activities on their own. Outdoor basketball courts built next to the tennis courts over the summer provided such students with a place to shoot some baskets when they felt like it. Other students played tennis, bowled, jogged, swam and biked as extracurricular activities.

Two changes were implemented this year regarding the football field.

The football stadium was dedicated to Haskell Henshaw, former athletics director, during half-time of a football game.

The other change was the building of a concession stand to take the place of the portable one that was used since the stadium opened three years ago.

The Varsity football team ended their regular season with a 8-1-1 record, their only loss coming from Flowing Wells. After the loss to Flowing Wells, some defensive changes were made that allowed the team to go undefeated the rest of the season, according to Larry Hughes, Varsity coach.

Scott Shill led the team in rushing with 1,952 yards. Glenn Dennard was second with 430 yards.

Quarterback Al Martinez passed for 1,210 yards with 14 touchdown passes.

Dennard led the team in receiving. He caught 38 passes for 719 yards. He was followed by Keith Rawls who had 22 catches for 305 yards.

Team scoring was led by Shill, Dennard, and kicker Mike Taylor. Shill scored 22 touchdowns and 132 points. Dennard had 19 touchdowns and 114 points and Taylor had 1 touchdown and scored 56 points.

Defensive leaders were Jim Breglia with 82 assisted tackles, Shill with 22 unassisted tackles, and Jeff Arredondo who led the team in interceptions.

Next year the team will move on to AAA competition which will be a great challenge according to Hughes.

Team injuries prompt single wing offense

The J.V. football team ended their season with a winning 5-3 record.

Halfway through the season, because of the injury of two of his quarterbacks, Mike Wehrli, coach, began using a single wing offense. With an abundance of good runners, the team piled up a large amount of rushing using the single wing during the latter half of the season.

Offensive standouts on the team were veteran lineman Joe Crouch, Rich Roland and Trey Kimball, and rushers Leedell Bunton, Todd Kinster and Umbell Franklin.

Defensive standouts were Roland, John Rich, Kimball, Chris Roosen and Reed Burk.

The freshman football team played to a 6-1-1 record this year. They were 5-0 in league play.

"They made a lot of progress," said Ron Davini, coach. He said they "pulled together and learned the Aztec system. They developed school pride, self pride, and team pride."

Outstanding players were spikers Shelley Beaton, Shawn Logan and setter Jodi Henley.

The J.V. volleyball team finished the year with a 5-9 record. The team improved throughout the season according to Keith Lewis, coach.

Lewis gave credit to returning sophomores Theresa Hanley, Jeanette Martinez, Shannon Ritchie and Gina Barro. Standouts on the team were freshman Lisa Montez and the team captain Sue Woessner.

Receiving the serve from the opposing team, Lisa Montez bumps the ball up to the spikers.

Varsity wrestling team shows improvement

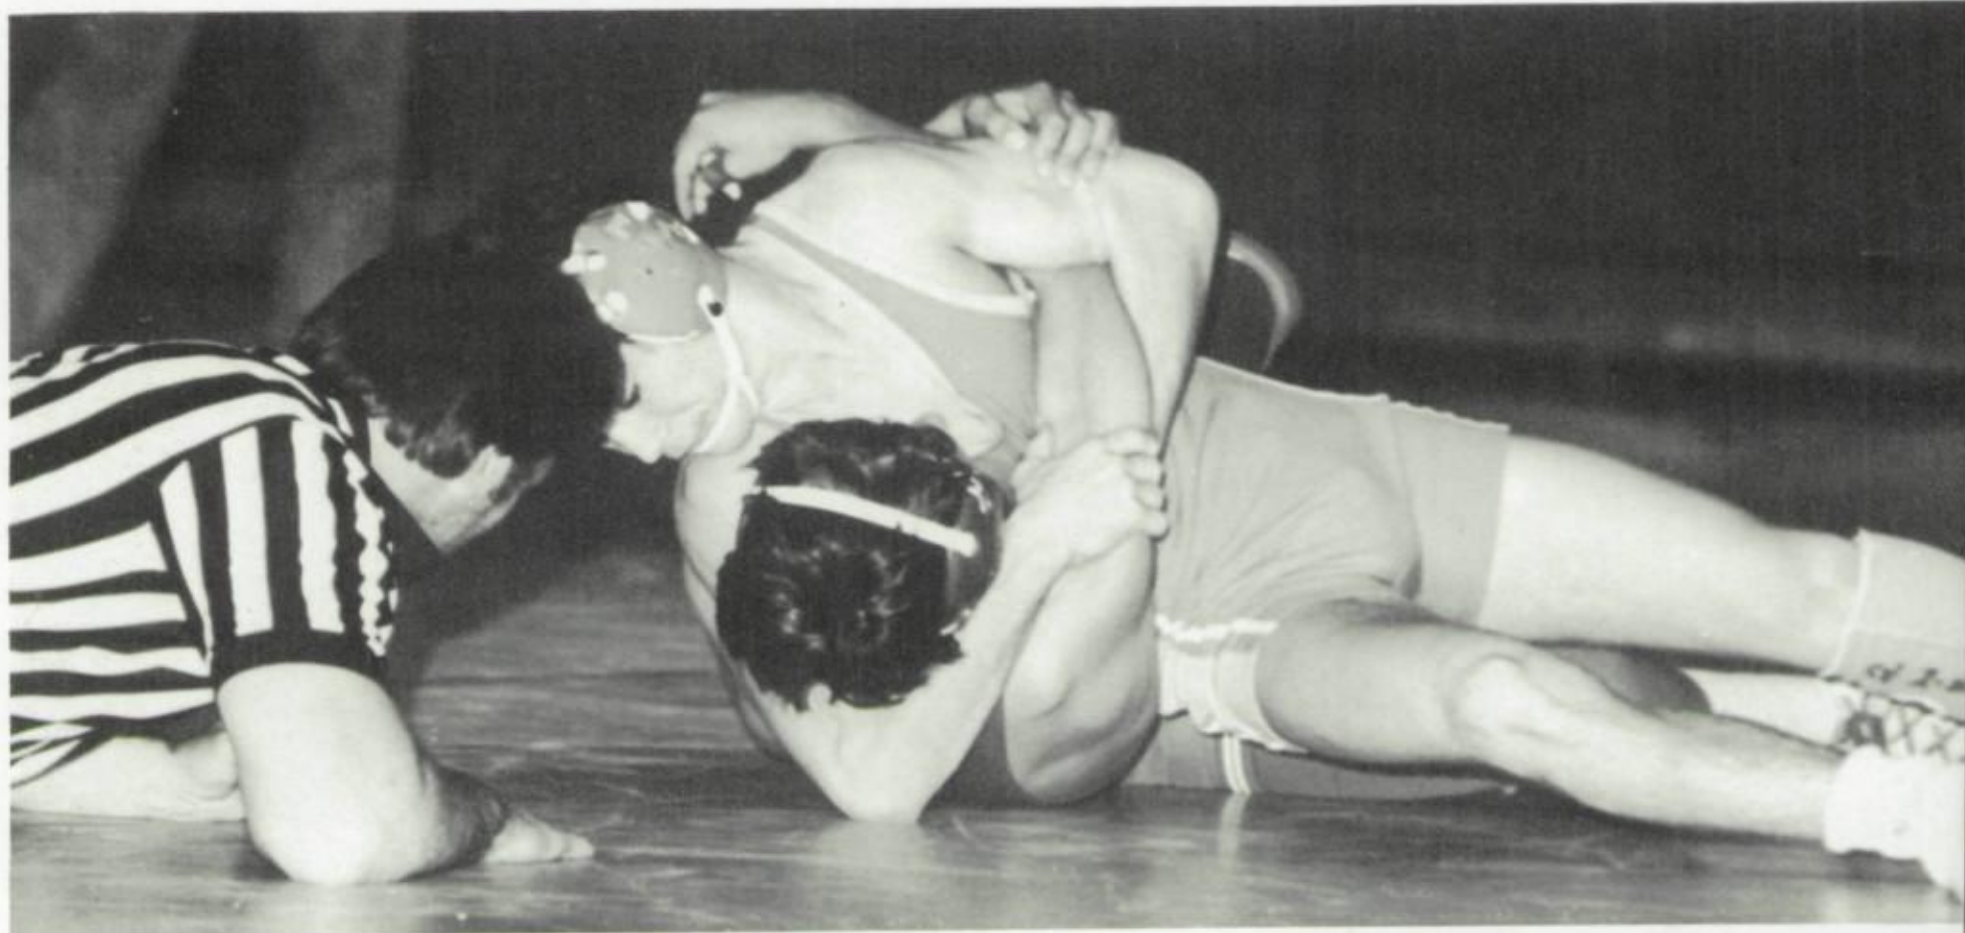

The Varsity wrestling team showed great signs of improvement this year, according to Dave Vibber, coach.

The team was young with two seniors, six juniors, two sophomores and three freshmen.

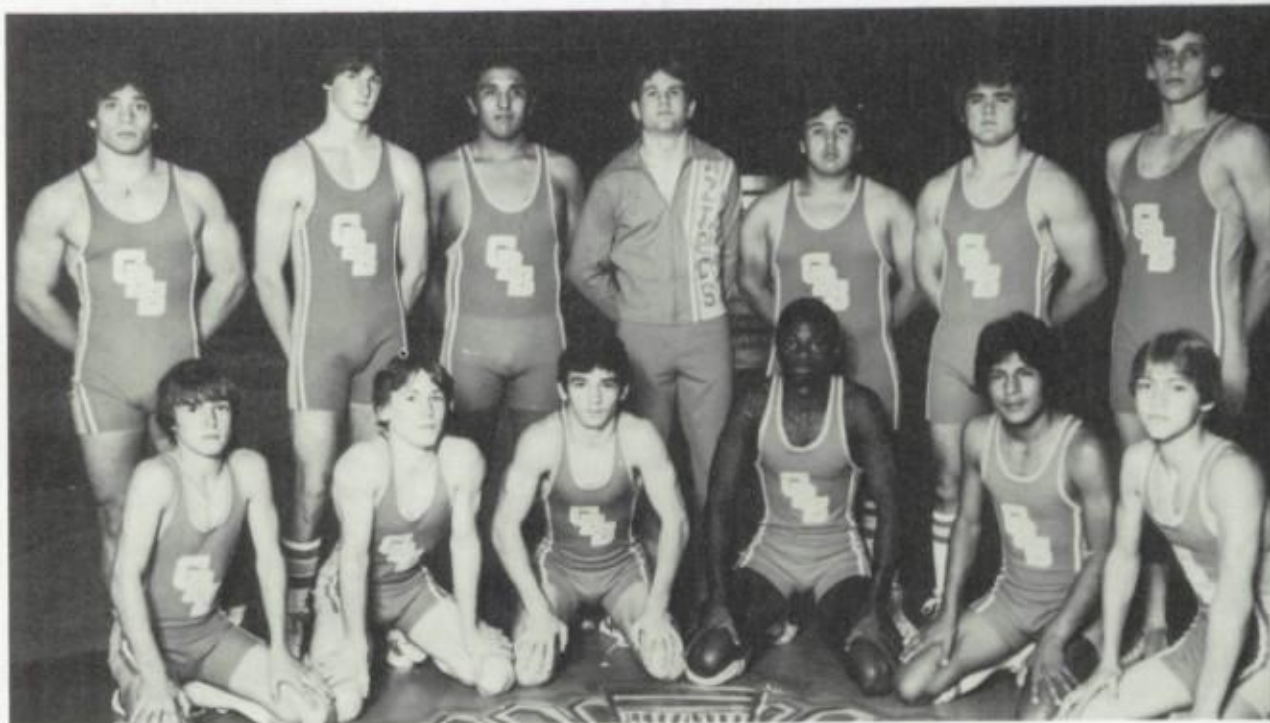

The team took 10th place at the Coolidge invitational. At the meet, Ken Bastion took first in the 179 pound weight class. Dwayne Hall took third in the 138 pound class with his only loss coming from the defending state champs who took first. Hall also took third at the Dysart invitational.

Team standouts were senior Fred Aldorasi who took third at the McClintock invitational and second at the Dysart invitational. Aldorasi also led the team in pins. Other standouts were Robin Williams, Manuel Vital, Les Johnson and heavyweight Bobby Vital. Vital took sixth at the McClintock meet.

According to coach Vibber these members have made great progress and will be tough as they progress through the program.

Both the girls' and boys' cross country teams had successful seasons this year, according to Barry Feldman, coach. The girls ended with a 5-3 record. The boys finished their season with a 10-1 record.

Top runners on the girls' team were Lynda Busick, Candi Smith, Dana Shaw and Irene Lopez. Top runners on the boys' team were Alex Escarcega, Kirk Johnson and Arnold Begay.

The swimming team had a rebuilding season this year. They finished with a 0-8 record. According to swimming coach Justine Ridge, the team made a great deal of improvement over the season.

Win streak break takes pressure off team

The Varsity basketball team began their season with a loss to Marana which broke their winning streak of 46 consecutive games. The loss, however, took the pressure off the team.

The team suffered from injuries. Andy Hurd, forward, broke his foot and Bruce Pettit, guard, hurt his ankle. Sammy Duane, coach, felt the injuries provided other team members with more playing experience which gave the team more depth.

Top scorers on the team were Andy Hurd with 18 points per game, Harry Payne with 13 points and Mark Ryan and David Duane with 12 points each per game. Duane was also the top rebounder with nine boards a game. Ryan led the team in steals and assists.

According to coach Duane the season was a year of changes.

He felt the team had really improved since the first game. "It was really a satisfying year. The team played hard and overcame the difficulties they encountered," Duane said.

Coaches look forward to AAA competition

Coaches are looking forward to entering the AAA league where they will be facing tougher competition during virtually every game during their respective seasons.

After five years of AA competition, enrollment increases are pushing school teams into the AAA league, central division.

The football team will be playing former state champions Mountain View and McClintock while the cagers will play powerhouses like Mesa and Chandler. The baseball team will face teams like Mountain View.

Of all the Varsity teams, the two time AA state championship basketball team will have the easiest transition of the three major sports, according to the coaches.

"I'd say close to one third of our schedule have been AAA teams and we have done that in the past," Sam Duane, Varsity basketball coach said.

According to Duane, the cagers played in the Fourth Annual Tri-Cities Classic defeating three AAA teams to take the championship. The team also played three other AAA teams during the course of the season.

"Night in and night out, I think the toughest thing is that we are going to be playing good teams every night," Duane said.

Larry Hughes, Varsity football coach, agrees with him. "In AAA basically week in and week out, you're going to be faced with physical football teams, whereas in AA you have probably four physical teams," Hughes said.

Hughes felt that in order to be successful in the AAA football league you have to "keep your skilled people healthy."

According to Ron Davini, Varsity baseball coach, the central division is the finest division in AAA.

"They play very aggressive and consistent baseball," Davini said. "All through the season it will be a much tougher schedule."

Davini said he sees the AAA league benefiting the Corona sports program.

"The better competition you play, the better your program becomes," he said.

Another benefit of entering AAA level is the less amount of travel needed to play non-division games, according to all three coaches.

"I think the biggest plus we are going to have is the travel. This year we have gone to Nogales, Mingus, Globe and places like that," Duane said. "In AAA, we won't be going as far and it will be easier for us," he added.

Another plus, according to Hughes, is that a AAA non-league game can still fill Henshaw stadium.

"If we turn around and play Nogales as a non-league game, it is just so far that they are not going to bring any people up here," Hughes said.

One of the main concerns of the coaches is depth.

According to Davini, in AA he could get away with one pitcher. In AAA he has to have at least two pitchers.

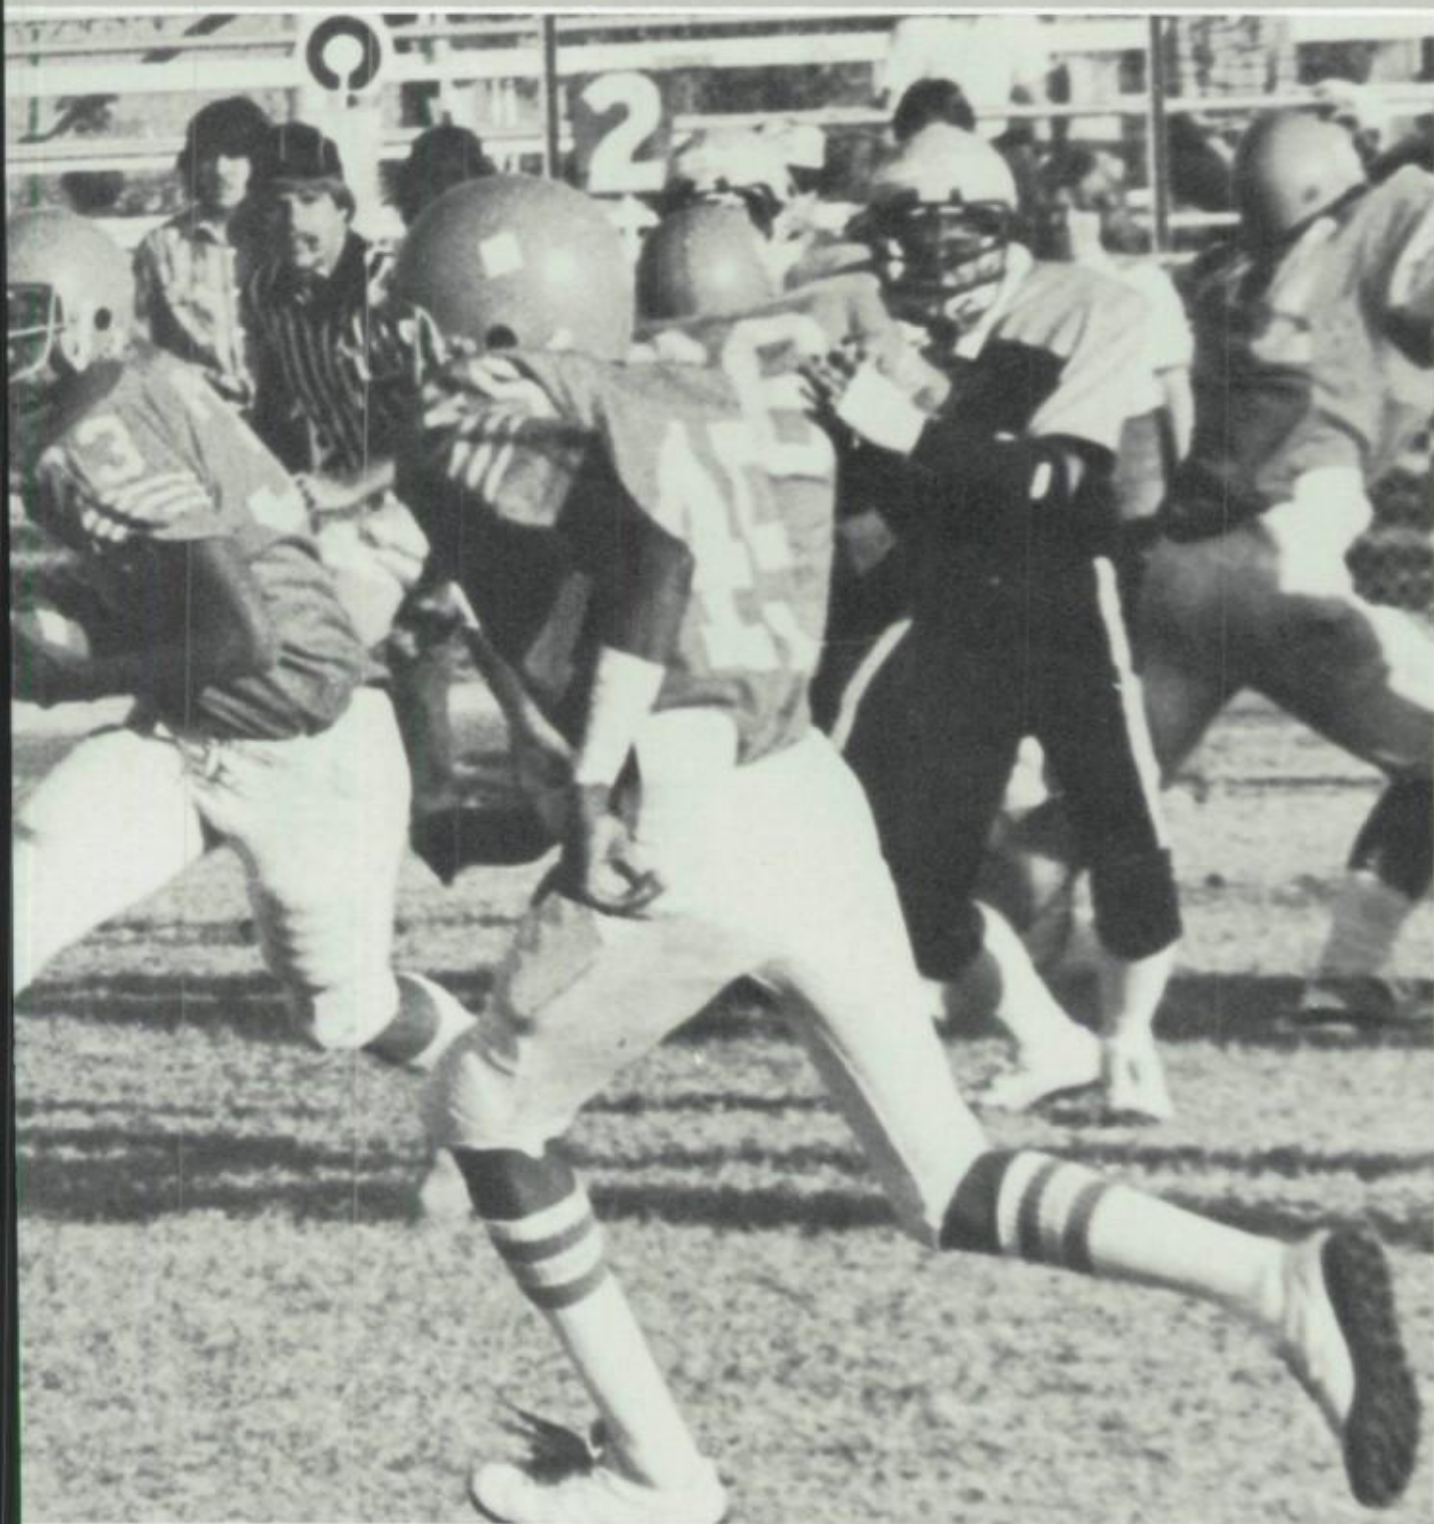

The Varsity football team, which Davini says will be entering the "black and blue league," will need more depth Hughes said.

"The bad thing is, you will be faced with more injuries, and you're going to need more depth," he added.

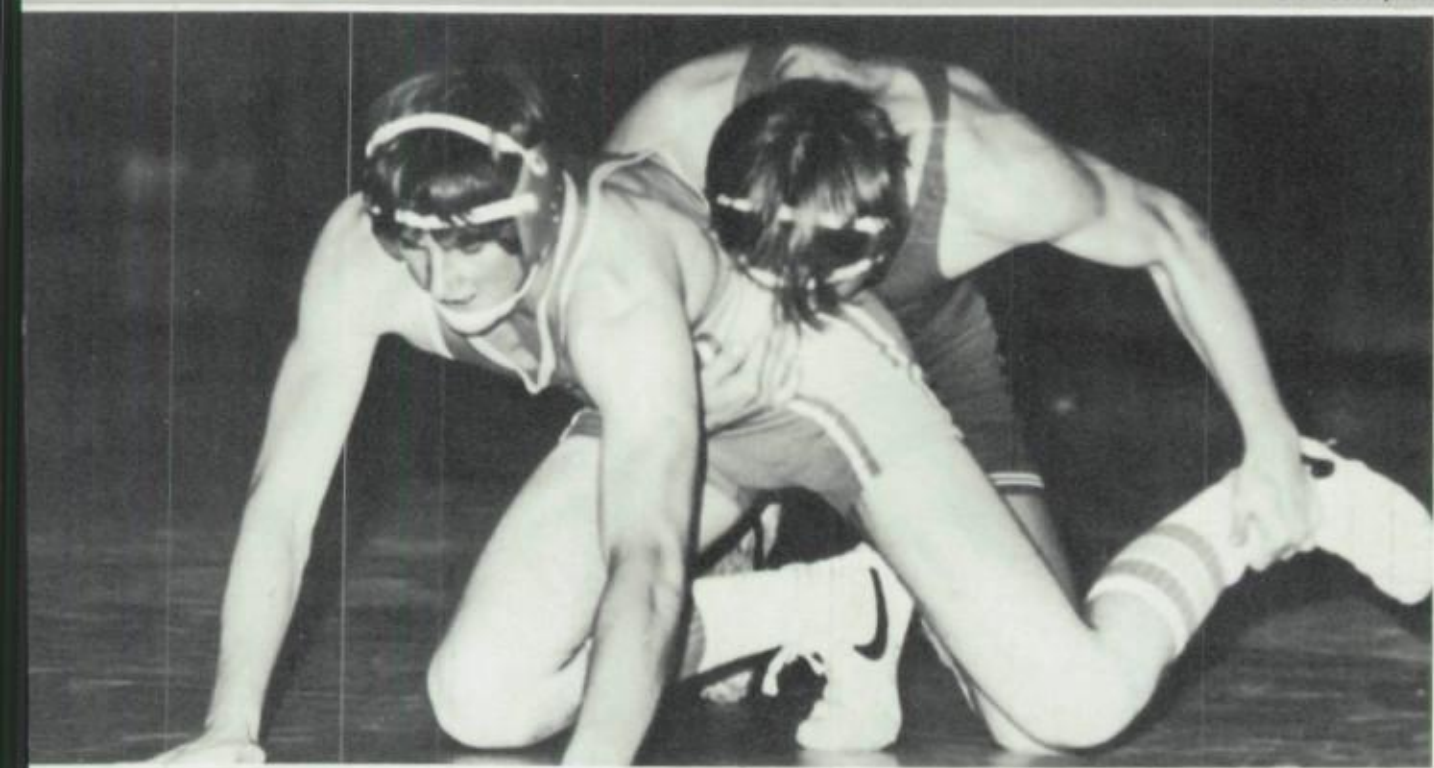

All three coaches agree that the first couple seasons will be rough, but with time comes success.

"Once we make the adjustment into AAA," Davini said, "I think it will be the cream of the crop in AAA."

Young basketball team plays consistently

The girls' Varsity basketball team played consistent basketball with whoever they played this year according to Larry Hughes, coach.

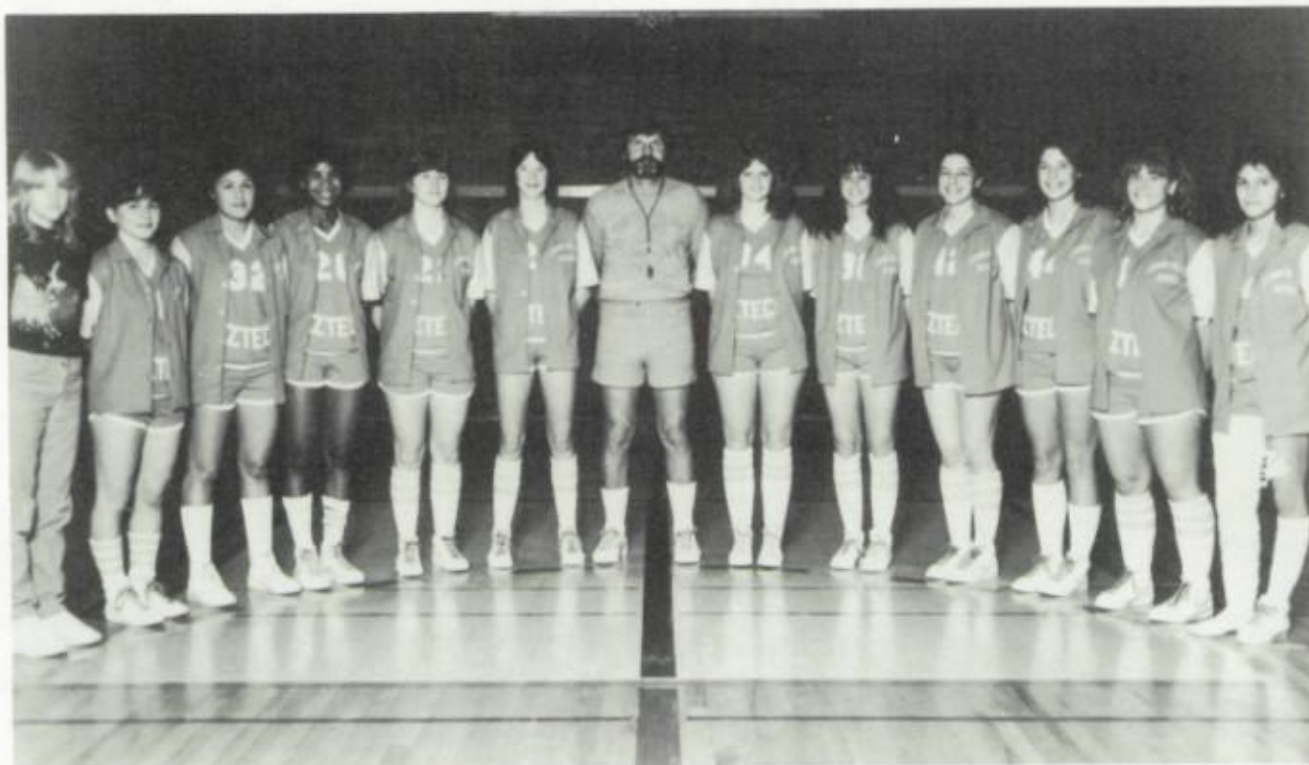

The team was young. Six of last year's top seven players graduated. Shelley Beaton was the only starter that returned to this year's team.

Top scorers on the team were Beaton with 15.5 points per game, and Lynne Long with 14.

Beaton, Long and Shawn Logan led the team in rebounding, averaging around eight rebounds apiece per game.

Other standouts included point guard Cynthia Nehls, who led the team in steals and assists.

Although the team was young, Hughes feels that the experience gained this season will make them a stronger team next year.

This year's girls J.V. basketball team had one of their best seasons ever according to Jim Armstrong, coach. Armstrong credits the success to the new freshmen on the team.

One of the season's highlights was the team's victory over Gilbert, breaking their 36 game winning streak.

Team standouts were Stephanie Bilow and Michele Myrann.

Armstrong feels that with such a good freshman squad that the Varsity team should win the AAA crown in two or three years.

Soccer team improves through AAA play

As Steve Johnson positions himself, Mike Solace bumps the ball.

Driving towards the goal, Tommy Von Boeck kicks the ball downfield.

The Varsity soccer team finished their second season with a 3-4-3 record. They placed fourth in the AAA central division.

According to Matt Leuck, coach, the team improved tremendously during the second half of the season. They lost only once after their first three games.

Junior John DeChandt, and freshman Vernon Henry led the team in scoring. DeChandt and Mike Taylor led the team in assists. Other team standouts included goalie Roger Csaki, Tony Von Boeck, Ken Johnson, Steve Johnson and Tommy Withgott.

Leuck is very optimistic about next year's season since 24 out of 26 of this year's players will be back. Leuck also feels that the team's two years of experience in AAA competition will give them an advantage over the other school sports as Coronado makes the transition into AAA play next year.

Pancake day, sponsored by Tempe Sunrise Kiwanis, provides Key Club members like Sheila Dawson and Arlene Waddell with an opportunity to serve the community.

Every other week, between second and third hours, clubs met on the "F" schedule. These organizations provided activities and companionship for students with similar interests. There were clubs dealing with everything from foreign languages to backpacking and from performing to helping other people.

The various organizations on campus had a very active season. Students, parents and teachers began to wonder if Corona's supply of eager and determined salespeople ever ran dry. Some club was selling something almost every school day. Cheese and sausage, stationery, candles, Rubik's cube keychains and calendars were a few of the products sold along with the usual array of candy.

Several clubs disbanded this year. The Art Club, Airplane Club and Rodeo Club all had problems getting either members or sponsors. The International Club divided into three new groups, the German Club, the French Club and the Spanish Club.

The Corona Community Club, however, became active again with the return of their sponsor. Also, several new music groups were created as students' interests became more defined.

Service projects were big activities for some clubs. The Key Club was the most active in community services. Other clubs held special fund raisers to donate money for the annual United Way drive.

All clubs were educational in one way or another through the experience they provided.

Band earns revenue for summer camp

Playing at football games, and pep assemblies is not the only thing the band does. When they are not selling concessions at A.S.U. home football games, they're busy selling other things such as chocolate Easter bunnies to raise money for band camp. Each student has to raise $250 dollars to pay their way to Camp Pacific in Carlsbad, California.

They performed in the Veteran's Day parade, the Fiesta Bowl parade, and others during the year.

The concert band performed in two concert festivals in Phoenix, a winter concert at Boyle Auditorium and a spring concert in small gym. They held a mini-assembly for the students in the spring and performed in the graduation ceremonies.

At the end of a song, Flag Corps member, Angela Johns waits for the next command.

Music groups play concerts in community

Working the concessions at ASU home games was just one of the many fundraising activities sponsored this year by A Capella, according to Cheri Mabbitt, sponsor.

Other activities were candy sales, a calendar sale and a mug sale.

The Jaztechs, a group of selected students from A Capella, performed at many community events this year and attended a Jazz Clinic at Northern Arizona University in February.

The group performed their jazz and popstyle at the United Way Luncheon in November and sang at the Christmas concert in Boyle auditorium, Mrs. Mabbitt said.

The Aztones, a first year course for students performed several events, according to Mrs. Mabbitt.

The Guitar Club, sponsored by Al O'Leary, performed at the Christmas concert and at the Fine Arts Festival in April.

Cheerleaders prompt unity, school spirit

"Better Than Ever" was the motto the cheerleaders chose this year. Their goals were to promote school unity and spirit.

They raised over two thousand dollars to go to cheerleading camp in La Jolla, California, during the summer. They went to camp to learn new ways to promote spirit, new chants and cheers.

Out of approximately one hundred girls that tried out for the Varsity, J.V. and Freshman squads, only eight made it for Varsity, eight for J.V. and six for Freshmen.

This year they sponsored the Sadie Hawkins dance in April, they also sold "Better Than Ever" buttons, to promote spirit.

Pom attends NAU camp in summer

During the summer the pom line went to a pom camp at Northern Arizona University to improve on their dance skills, according to Robin Shaw, sponsor.

The pommies spent many hours before and after school to practice, Ms. Shaw said.

The pommies also performed with the band in the Fiesta Bowl and Veterans Day parades. Other activities in which they participated included the Marcos de Niza invitational and the Christmas Luncheon.

Fundraising activities included selling suntan lotions, calendar planners, pretzels and a car wash. The group also held the first dance of the year.

Mime troop reopens, new classes form

An increase in drama students enlarged the Speech and Drama Club, reopened the mime troop, expanded presentations, and added new classes. In the previous years, the drama classes have been limited, with only one beginning class being offered. This year there were three. Keith Lewis, English teacher, added two beginning drama classes to his schedule and Mrs. Linda Parrish, drama teacher, added stagecraft and acting 3-4.

The first presentation of the year by Actors Anonymous was The Good Doctor. It was held in the amphitheater in mid-October.

This year the speech squad went to twelve meets. They participated in a trophy tournament at Westwood High School and a meet at Northern Arizona University. A new category called dual-acting was added to a few of the competitions. In this form of speech two people act out a scene in a play with props and costumes.

The club participated in the annual Tempe Jaycee's haunted house in October as a fund raising activity.

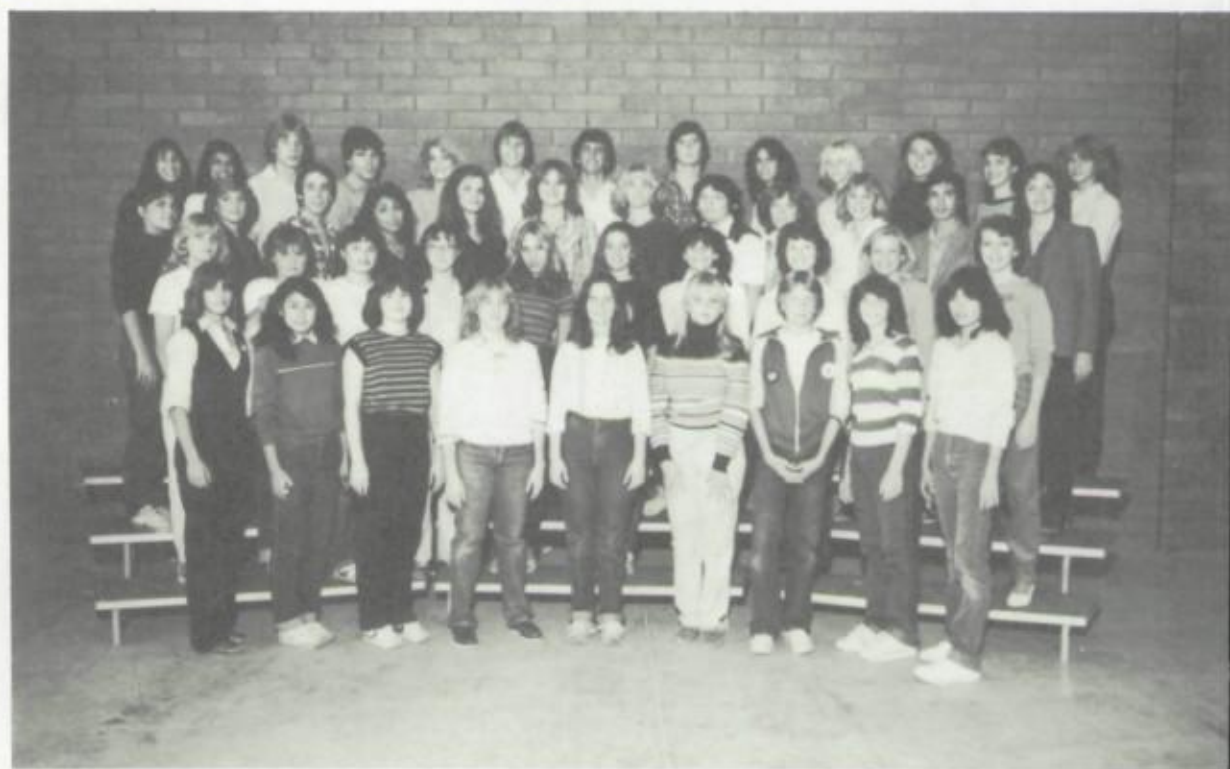

They also sponsored a group of actors from Foothills High School in California in their production of Tartuffe at Corona, in January.

Students study government in Washington

Three students traveled to Corona, and seventeen students traveled to Washington D.C. through travel programs.

Irene Madsen from Denmark, Briony Lidstone from South Africa and Tuuli Suvanto from Finland, attended Corona through special programs.

According to them, there are distinct differences between schools in their home countries and here.

They all agreed that the schools here aren't as strict as their home schools.

"There they were uniforms, no make-up, no jewelry, everything is more strict," Briony said.

According to Tuuli, the schools and teachers in Finland are more strict. There are no student-teacher relationships.

In Denmark the social life is a lot different, Irene said. "We don't date in Denmark. We go out in groups to dances and meet guys."

Reasons for coming to America varied between the students.

"America is something so different, you read about it, and you always think of America as a dream," Briony said. "I also wanted to meet the people and see the country."

Tuuli decided to come here to become more independent.

"It will be hard to leave America, because I won't know if I'll be coming back," Tuuli said.

"It's different," Irene said. "I don't know if I'd like to live here. Your life is so easy, there is so much to make your life here easier."

Seventeen students participated in the Close-Up program, sponsored by James Denton. Close-Up is a week long, seminar in Washington D.C. in April.

The students talked to senators, representatives and officials of the Reagan administration.

They had discussions with students from all over the country about their daily sessions.

They took part in the close up/c-span series which was a live educational broadcast of the discussions that students involved in close-up have.

They saw the House of Representatives and the Senate in action and visited congressional officers, the Supreme Court and the library of Congress.

The students who participated in Close-Up raised their money by having companies or people sponsor them. The group also sold light bulbs to raise funds.

Sunrise staff utilizes VDT in production

A video display terminal (VDT) was added to the newspaper class this year saving time and money and providing an educational experience for journalism students.

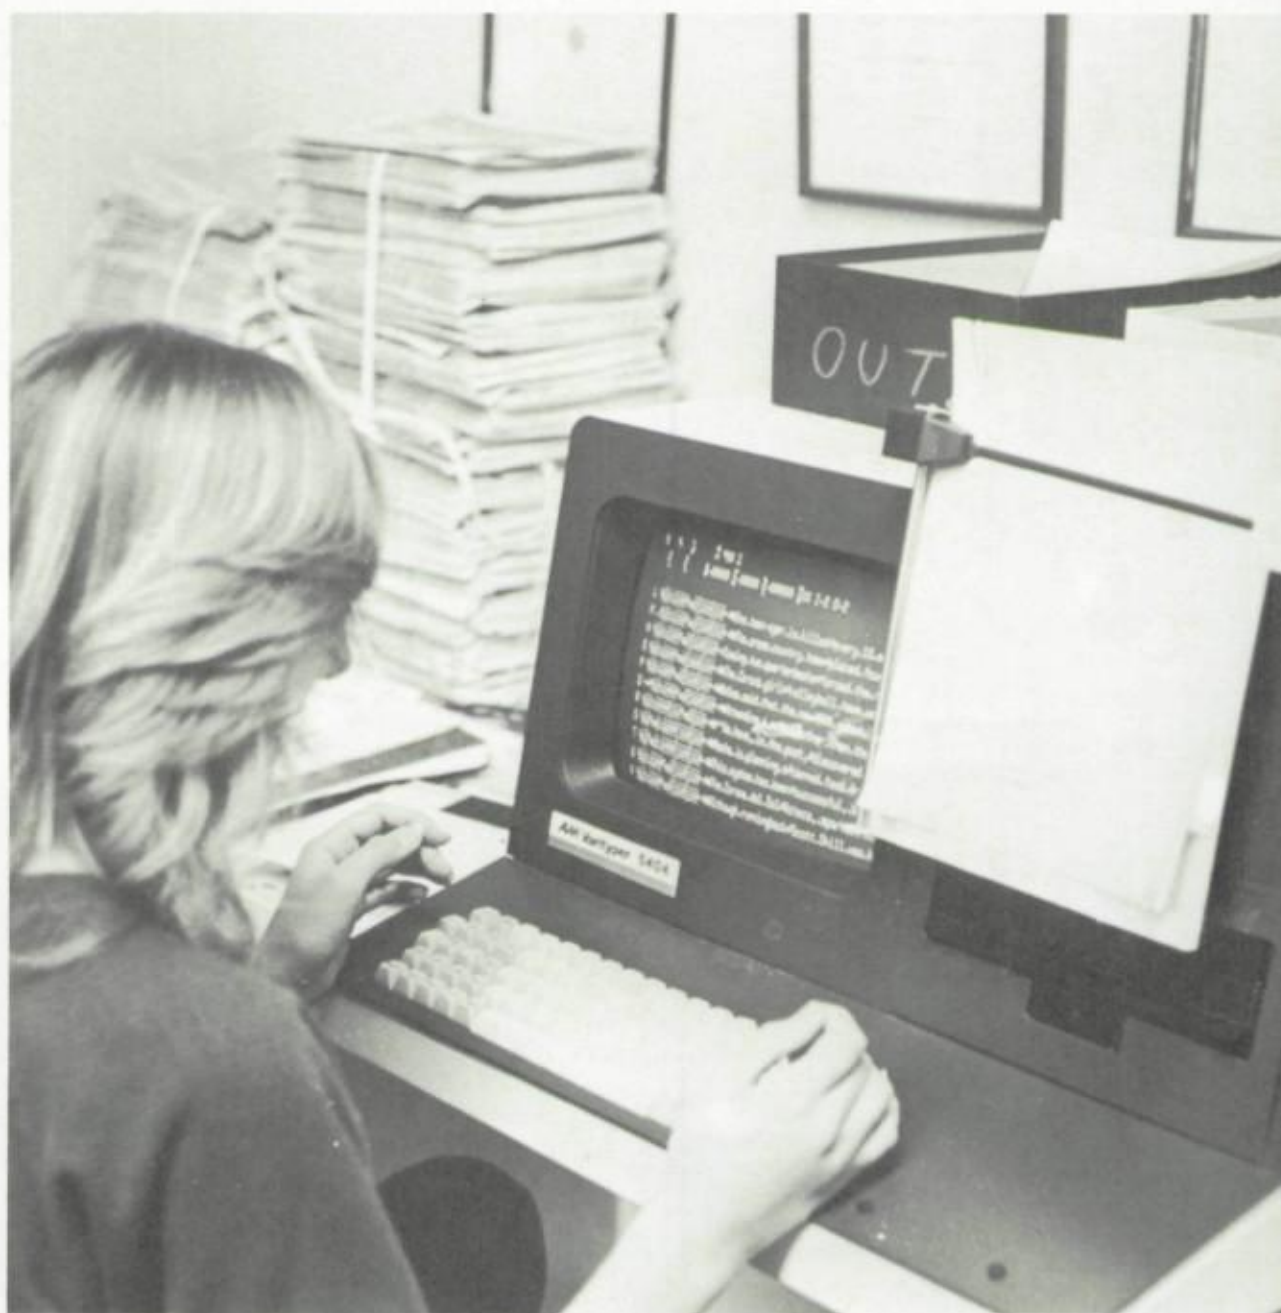

The VDT helps the staff cover events that are more current because they no longer have to send copy to the printer a week earlier to be set in type. The $7,000 computer saves the "Sunrise" $100 an issue.

Last summer, several staff members attended the Arizona Interscholastic Press Association (AIPA) workshop at Northern Arizona University. Other conventions students attended included the AIPA fall convention at Central Arizona College and the Journalism Education Association meeting in San Francisco.

Sunset staff gives away cotton candy

In a promotional activity, the yearbook staff gave away free cotton candy to students who bought their yearbooks before November 25.

The cost to produce one book this year was $17.56, but it was sold at the beginning of the year for $12.

The difference was made up in advertising revenue and fund raising activities such as the Rubick cube keychain sale in October.

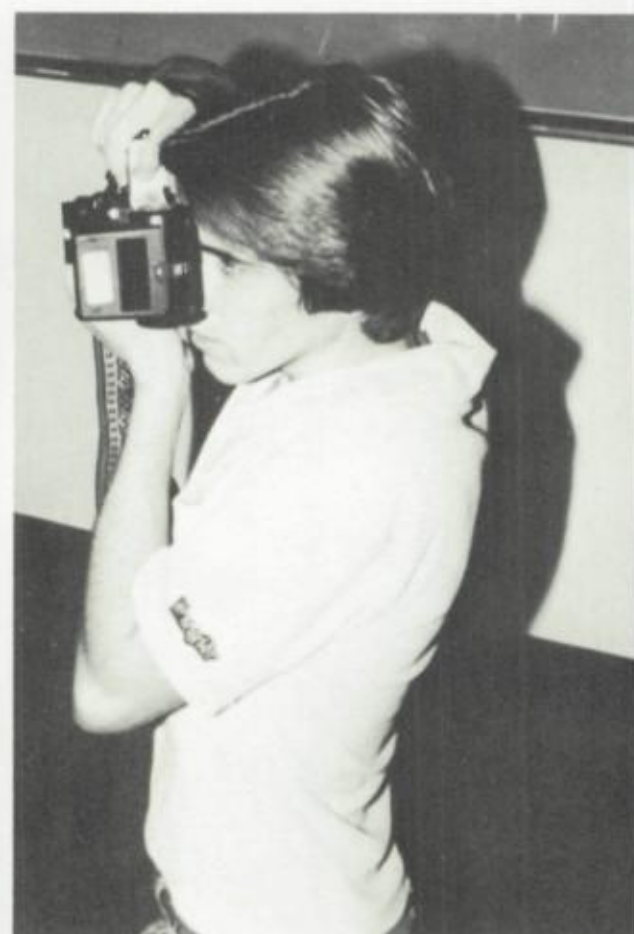

The cover of this year's "Sunset" cost about $4,000, about eight hundred of which was spent having a custom die made.

The yearbook staff, along with other journalism students, attended the Arizona Interscholastic Press Association (AIPA) summer workshop at Northern Arizona University and the AIPA fall convention at Central Arizona College. Publication students also attended a Journalism Education Association convention in San Fransisco.

Council plans anti-vandalism campaign

The student council's basic responsibilities are to coordinate the school calendar with activities and sales, according to Larry Campbell, sponsor. They also show a sense of leadership and promote school spirit.

According to Campbell, the members of student council gain experience in leadership activities. They develop closeness and unity with the council.

"It's like a team, they work together, they argue, they develop closeness and fellowship," Campbell said.

At the beginning of second semester the student council had an anti-vandalism campaign. The district gave the school half of the money saved from not having the school vandalized to buy something for the school.

The Youth Advisory Council is a group of students made up of the student body president, the editor of the paper and two more students selected by the principal. They met with John Waters, district superintendent, to discuss what is happening at their school and tell him how the students feel about certain situations.

Clubs help in heritage experience

Helping others understand more about black heritage and culture, increasing knowledge economically, politically and giving aid and service is the main function of the Black Student Union (BSU), Felice Parham, sponsor, said.

The BSU had a career day at Tempe High in February to get together with other blacks in the community, and discuss career possibilities.

They donated money to children's hospitals and nursing homes. The money was raised by car washes, pendants and food sales.

MECHA tried to encourage Hispanic students to continue their educations after high school, according to Raul Sandoval, co-sponsor.

Their activities included car washes and a recruiting party.

Jesus Peralta also sponsored MECHA.

The Native American Club brings students together and meets with similar groups from other schools.

They sold frybread at football games, had a Halloween party and a social dance with groups from different schools.

COE, DECA help students find careers

Cooperative Office Education (COE) gives the students who have an interest in business an opportunity to explore their interest in a related office setting.

This year they sold Valentine carnations, took inventory at clothing stores and had a mug sale and candy sales.

Distributive Education Clubs of America (DECA) provides leadership and career awareness in marketing.

The Toastmaster organization helped the students learn how to speak better to their customers through lectures.

Their fund raisers included a dance and Christmas ornament, stationery, and candy sales.

JAG helps students find career jobs

Jobs for Arizona Graduates (JAG), sponsored by Hilder Williams, was a new club responsible for career orientation, job awareness and placement of students in the program.

According to Ms. Williams, 90 percent of the students are placed in a job through JAG. The students can be in anything from sales to designing.

Quill and Scroll, a national honor society for high school journalists, attended the Journalism Education Association convention at San Francisco in April, according to Bob Muller, sponsor.

The National Honor Society, (NHS) sponsored the freshmen orientation and were ushers at open house, according to Keith Lewis, sponsor.

According to Lewis each student is rated by teachers and must have a high grade point average.

"They have to exemplify high standards in character, service and leadership," Lewis said.

The Outdoor Science Club, sponsored by Mike Trimble, went on a backpacking trip in the Superstition Mountains in December. They also hiked down the Havasupai trail, and went on horseback riding trips.

The club is for those students interested in studying the outdoors, according to Trimble.

"They're learning while they're having fun," Trimble said. He tells them about the biological and geological background of the area they are at.

Club divides into separate organizations

The termination of the International Club brought into existence the Spanish, German, and French Clubs.

The Spanish Club, sponsored by Geri Varela, spanish teacher has decided to set aside its funds this year to buy a (TTY) telephone system for the deaf program at Corona.

"We see this club as a service club," Valera said.

Fund-raising activities included two bake sales and a carmel apple sale.

The German Club attended a state convention in April and had an Octoberfest at Kiwanis Park.

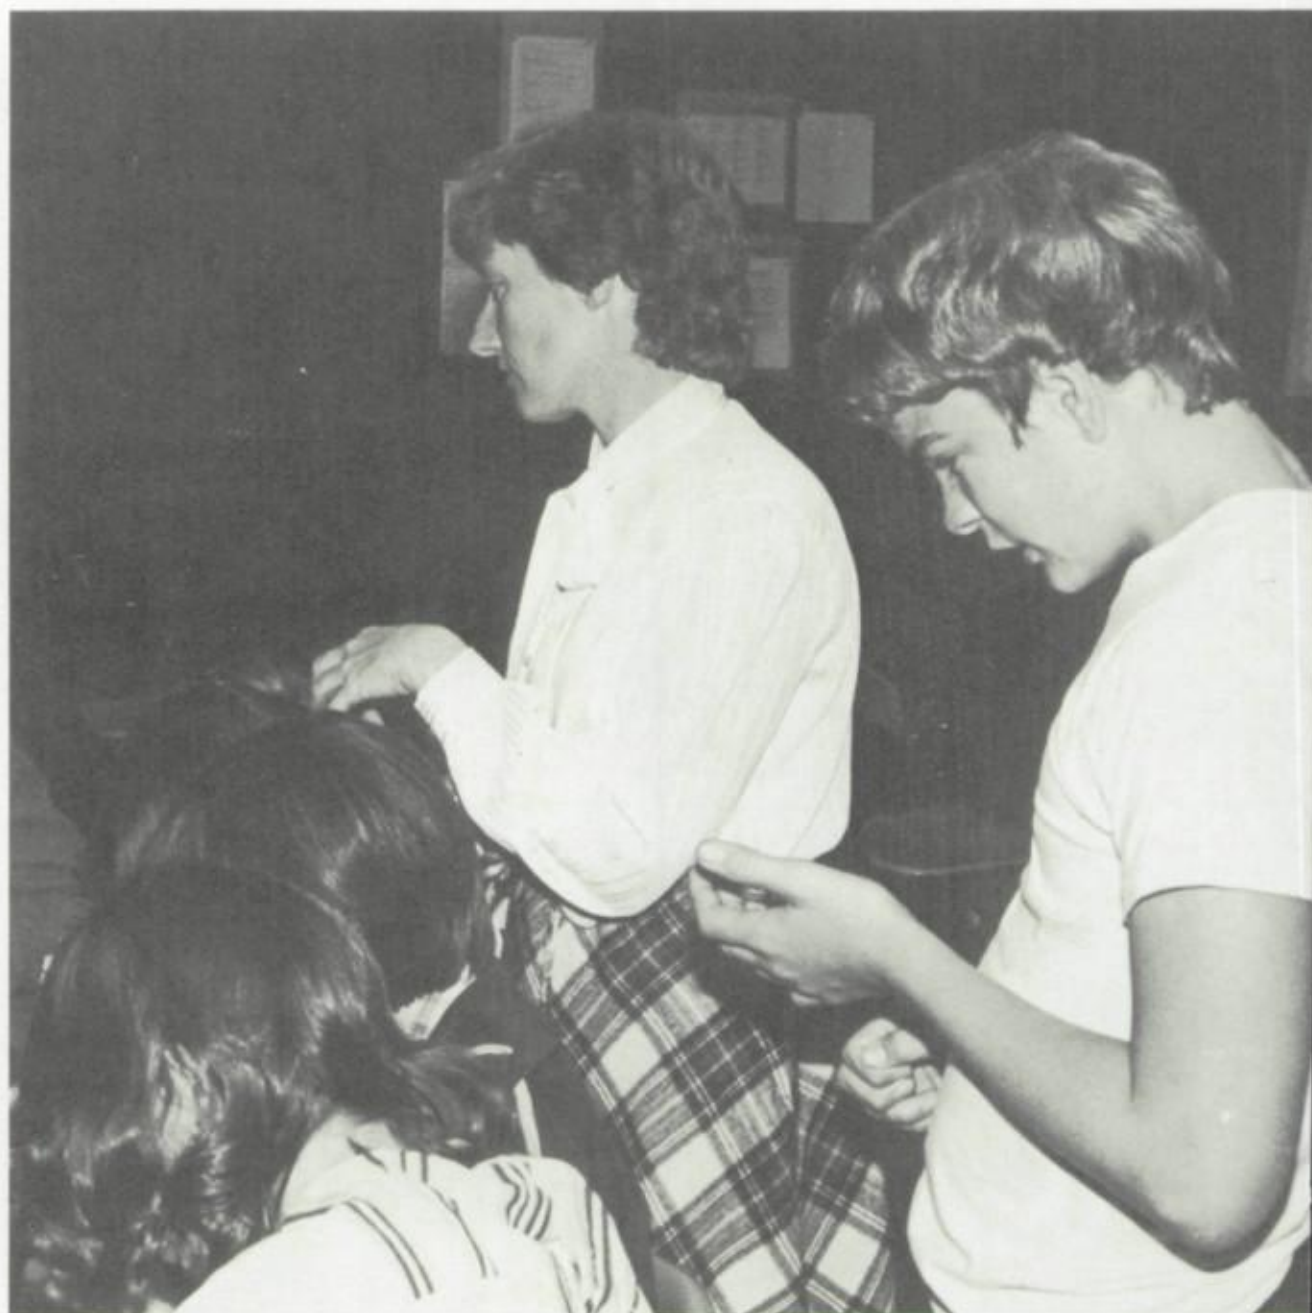

According to Judy Fullerton, sponsor, the club raised money by selling German Christmas calendars, candy and holding a car wash.

Studying more aspects of French civilization was the main goal of the French Club, according to Randy Nissly, sponsor.

"It is more of an extension of the learning experience instead of a social type thing. We have fun doing it too," Nissly said.

All three sponsors agreed that breaking up the International Club into three different clubs had been beneficiary to the members.

"You can spend more time on each culture," Fullerton said.

Frisbee club teaches sport to members

In its second year of existence, the Key Club tripled its membership to 75 members, according to Ruben Duran, sponsor.

The club's community service projects included a booth at the All-City Halloween Carnival, a pancake breakfast at McKemy Junior High, and a football stadium clean up.

The group also attended the Key Club State Convention in Albuquerque, New Mexico during May.

The Frisbee Club, sponsored by Greg Riccio, was one of the new clubs on campus this year.

The main purpose of the club was to enrich skills in the sport of frisbee, according to members.

Fundraising activities were limited to a bake sale because of the process of getting the club off the ground, one member said.

The Corona Community Club's purpose was to expand the community involvement approach to learning, according to Connie Kamm, sponsor.

The club arranged for Santa to come to school so the students could have their pictures taken with him. They also held a fashion show in the early spring.

Chess Club hosts state championship

Trying to get all the people who have lettered involved in a constructive activity for the school is the Letter Club's purpose according to Larry Hughes, sponsor.

This year they purchased a new scoreboard in the big gym. They also helped pay for half of a new electronic baseball scoreboard.

They raised their money through revenue earned with the Coke machines, and from selling concessions at the games.

They also went on their annual ski trip to Sunrise in March.

The Chess Club hosted both the team and individual state tournaments this year, according to Mike Wehrli, sponsor.

The team went to tournaments in Bullhead City and Tucson and was the number one rated club in the central division.

The eighty-five member Ski Club, sponsored by Larry Ladue, went on three major trips this year.

The club raised money through candy sales and its annual dance featuring ski films.

Spirit groups raise money, give support

The selling of cowbells, shakers and knit caps was a way the Pep Club rose spirit during football season, according to Mrs. Gryder, sponsor.

The Pep Club, sponsored by Mrs. Caroline Shultz, Mrs. JoAnne Gowen, Jack Terry, and Mrs. Isabelle Gryder, also sold hot dogs at home football games.

The Wrestler Aides give the team moral support, according to Dave Vibber, coach.

Along with keeping statistics for dual meets and tournaments, they promote wrestling by making posters.

They go to all the meets and tournaments.

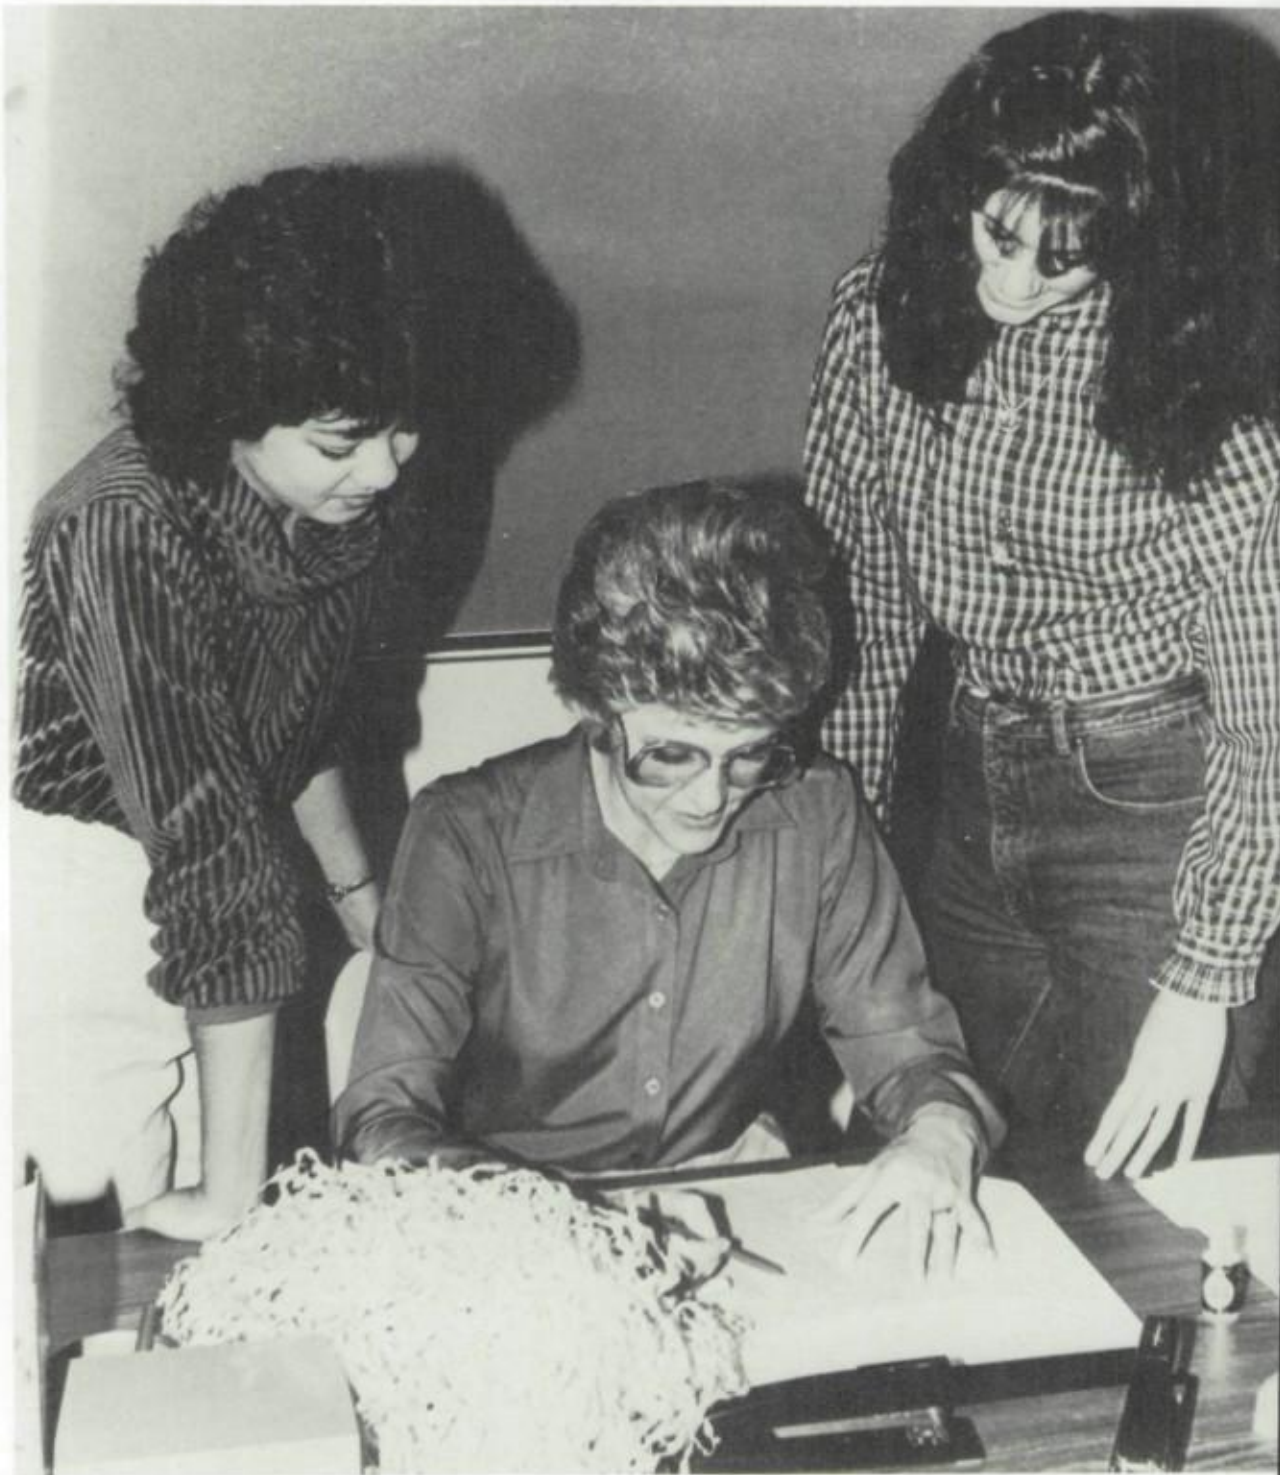

After accumulating all the statistics they make individual statistics for each wrestler.

"They also film home matches," Vibber said.

Earlier in the year they sold lotion soap to help buy their uniforms and team t-shirts.

Classes sit together during pep assemblies so class competition can be graded more easily.

Becoming a seasoned Aztec is a process that spans several years. It is one that requires many changes in feelings and attitudes.

The furthest from this goal were the 428 freshmen enrolled this year. They struggled to find their classes, a dilemma made only worse by asking an upperclassman for directions. They gradually learned the truth about the elevator keys and pool passes. Nevertheless, they survived what is sometimes called the "freshman disease."

The 398 sophomores, however, were a different story. They were relaxed at the idea that they knew their way around the school. They knew their standing with the other classes and teased the freshmen accordingly. They struggled with what was the first research paper for many in sophomore composition class. The hours spent in the library and at home deep in frustration made many wish it would be their last paper.

Much of the 393 juniors' year was spent in anticipation of their senior year. In October many juniors registered to take the PSAT-NMSQT, a test that helps prepare them for next year's SAT as well as helps them get college scholarships. Money was raised for the junior-senior prom, the senior trip and senior color in the 1983 yearbook.

Finally, all the years invested in school culminated in the senior year. Many of them were attacked by "senioritis" or an extreme restlessness and desire to move on. After graduation, the 345 seniors were seasoned in the world of children and teenagers but would soon begin their learning as adults.

Seniors elect Shelley Beaton as president

Many activities were sponsored by the class of '82 including Homecoming and Spirit Week. "We felt Homecoming was the best this year!" Shelly Beaton, senior class president said.

Other officers included Tomi Wilson, vice president; Debbie Fuhrman, secretary; Jeff Vincent, treasurer, Sylvia Montez; girls' representative; and Glenn Dennard, boys' representative.

Assisting Lowell Brown in sponsoring class activities such as the sale of Spirit Towels were Jim Denton and Carol Hines.

Most of the money they made was spent on Homecoming and a senior gift.

Promised seniors plan long engagements

Although "going together" has been around for awhile, being promised is something new that students are doing.

Going together is being with each other and the enjoyment of doing everything together, according to Tomi Wilson, senior. Being promised is promising one another to eventually become engaged.

Tomi has been going with Mark Ryan, senior, for the past one and a half years and they are promised.

"In a couple of years, after we're old enough and can support ourselves and prove to everyone that it's real, then we'll get married," Tomi said.

Kristin Ohlin and Bobby Candelaria, both seniors, are also promised. They've been going together for two and a half years.

"We know that we're what each other wants because our priorities are set to one another," Kristin said.

Yet, parental attitudes vary. "My mom doesn't mind. Sometimes she's cautious about some things," Mark said.

According to Kristin and Tomi, their parents want whatever makes them happy.

"My parents haven't said much, but what they have said I've thought about a lot. They said that I should go out with my friends also," Bobby said.

Dennard plans for two careers

Glenn Dennard, senior, plans to try to attain a college degree in business with financial scholarship.

"My plans are to use my ability in football to further my education," Glenn said.

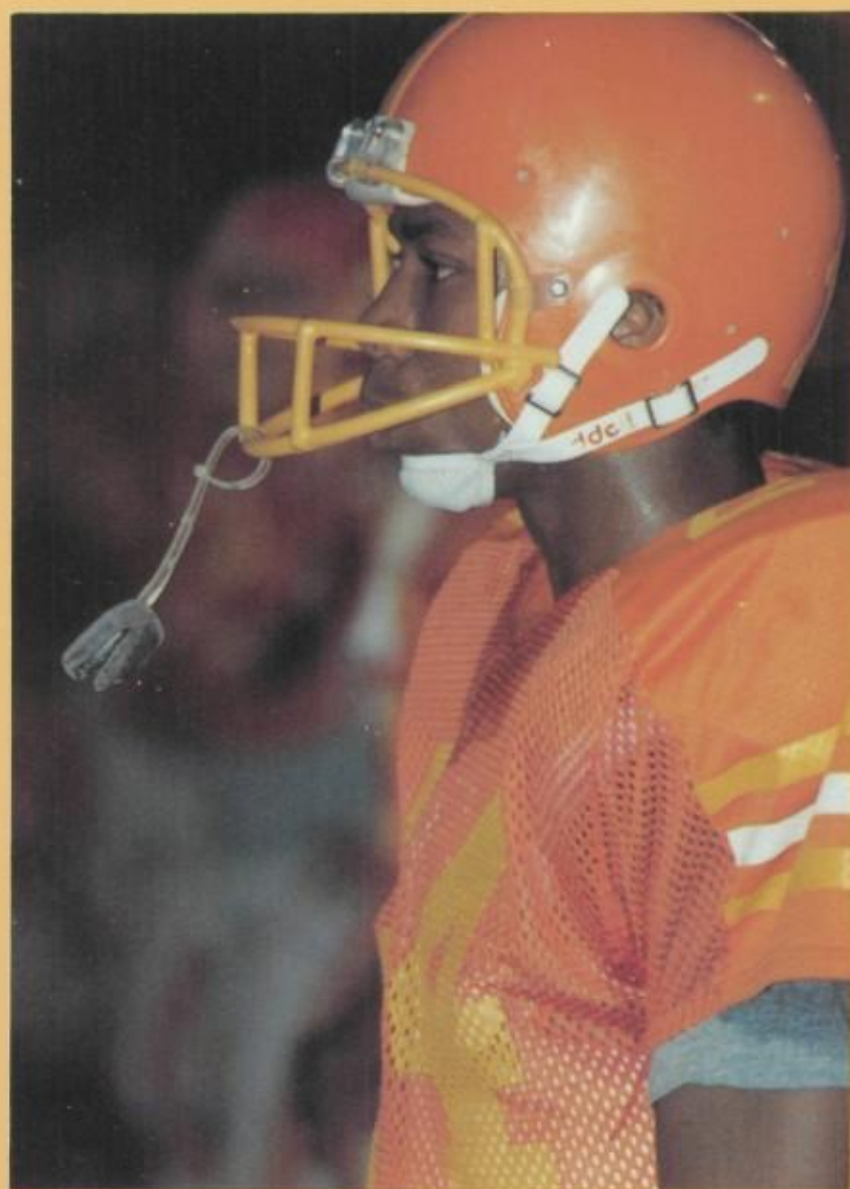

Of the colleges Glenn wants to attend, the University of Southern California (USC) is presently his top choice.

If USC doesn't come through, Dennard said he would play for any Pac-10 school.

According to Glenn, just because his brother Preston plays wide receiver for the Los Angeles Rams does not necessarily mean he will go pro.

Glenn said if he gets a chance to play pro, he will jump at it. "But I don't want to be at the point where if I don't make a pro team, I'm out on nothing."

Law makes 18 year olds register for military draft

In July of 1980 the government passed a law that would require all men of 18 years of age to register for the draft. For the first time in America since 1973 young men were forced to register for the draft. Failure to register would constitute, in the eyes of the government, a felony.

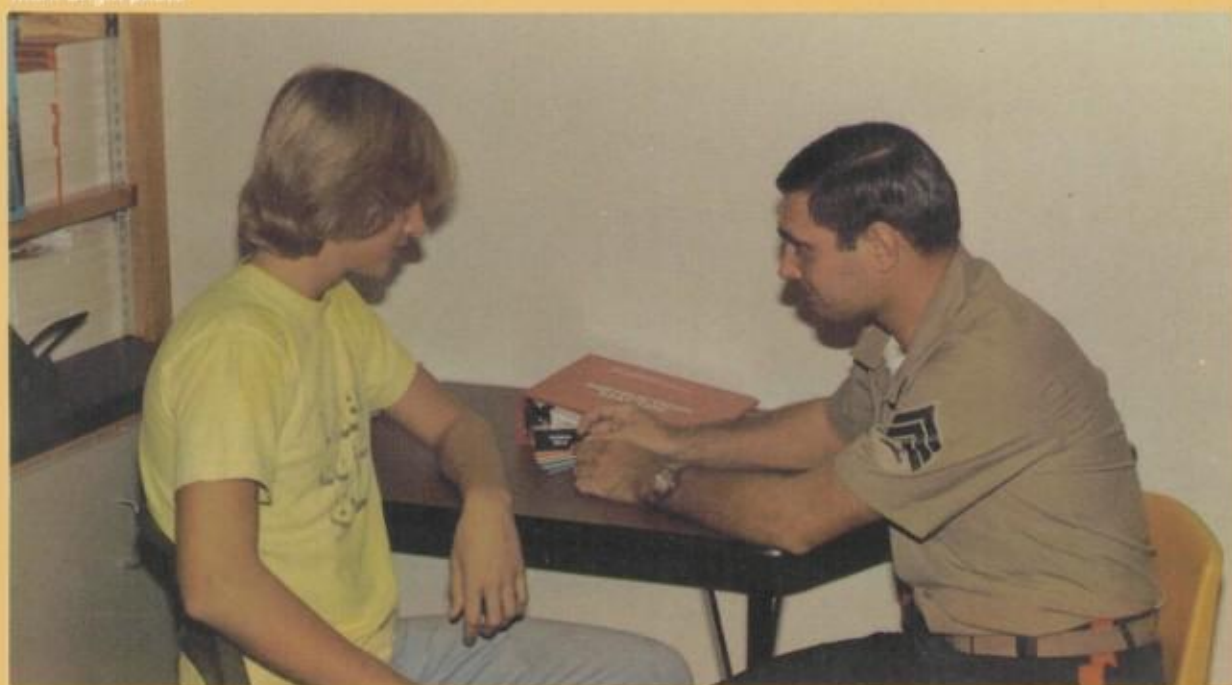

The prospective draftees are required to register at their local post office within thirty days of their eighteenth birthday. Figures show during the first year of registration over 90% of the eligible young men registered. Since then only about 70% have been showing up at the post offices to register.

Many people favor the registration. "Not only should they be registered, but they should go ahead and draft them. They should draft women too. That way our country would be ready if we had to go to war," said American History teacher and Vietnam vet Jesus Peralta.

"Everybody, both men and women, sometime between their graduation from high school and the age of 25 should serve their country. We can't maintain a free democracy if people don't realize they have an obligation to keep their country strong," said English teacher Mike Wehrli.

Peralta advises junior class for third year

The annual junior-senior prom, a car wash and a carnation sale in the fall were just a few of the activities staged by the junior class, according to Jesus Peralta, sponsor.

The money made by these activities will be used for next year's senior color in the year-book and the senior trip, according to Dan Furlone, president.

Officers this year were Dan Furlone, president; Charlotte Conrad, vice president; Sharon Giese, secretary; Naomi Nakagawa, treasurer; Arlene Chin, girls representative; and Troy Landrum, boys representative.

Duane recognizes advantages, problems with dad as coach

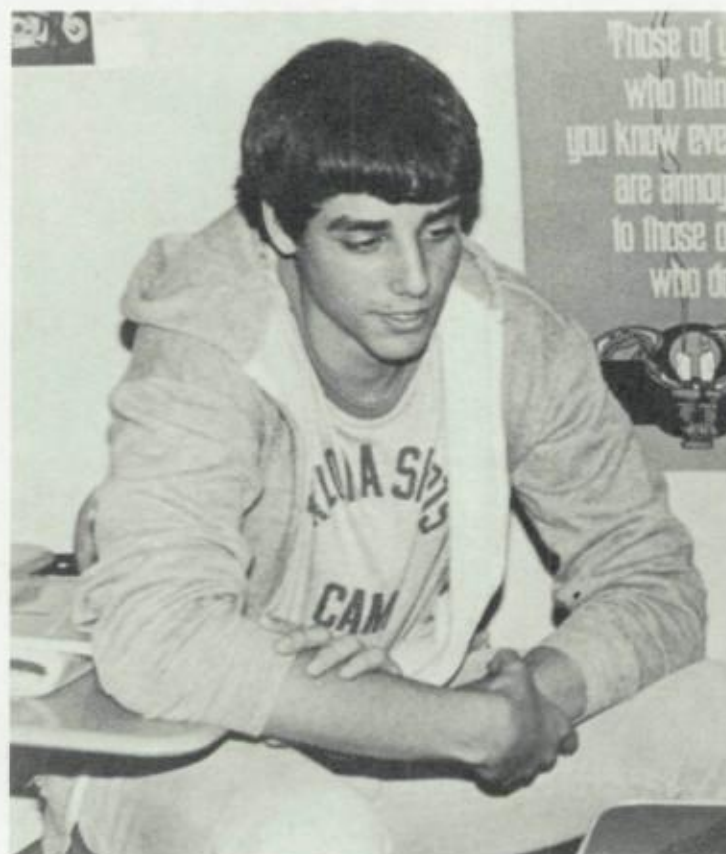

David Duane is one of the few members of the varsity basketball team who has something the rest of them don't. His father is the coach.

Some problems arise from this situation though. According to David, his dad is sometimes harder on him just to make sure he is not showing any favoritism.

Like most fathers, Coach Duane will talk to David about the game.

"He will tell me what I did right and wrong," David said.

His father doesn't push him into playing basketball, David said. "If I don't want to play, I don't have to. He leaves it up to me."

Students are eligible to make 5.0 average

Kim Hickey

Although there are many students taking honor classes, Kim Hickey is the only one who has a full load of them.

Along with her classes, Kim is also president of the Pep Club, member of the Spanish and close-up clubs and works as a carry-out at Smitty's.

To a certain extent, the activities do interfere with her schoolwork, which she has a lot of.

"But any activity will interfere with your schoolwork. A person should decide what is important to them," Kim said.

The pressure in taking five honor classes is finding the extra time they require, according to Kim.

"I am always running to get something," Kim said.

Sometimes students single her out and make cracks about her being a "brain."

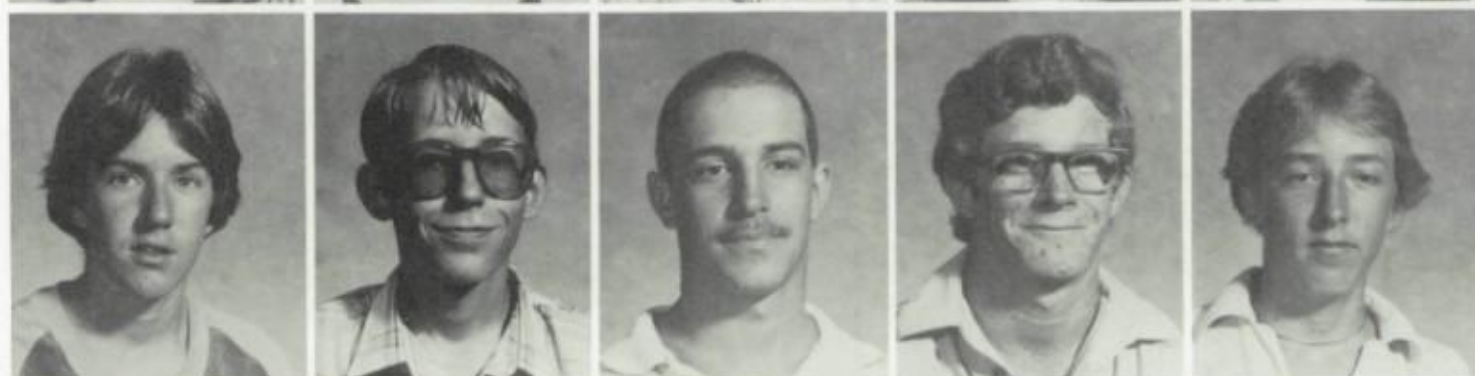

"But I am not. I am just trying to better myself for the future," Kim said.

Students cruise Main in hope of good time

A major crackdown on cruising Main Street beginning last fall has had little effect keeping some students from their favorite weekend activity.

According to one student, the reason he and his friends risk cruising Main Street is the fun and adventure of it all.

Some students who didn't want to risk getting a citation began cruising elsewhere.

"I must say Casa Grande has the best cruising I've ever seen. It may be a small town, but do they know how to have fun," Sarah Dougherty said.

But cruising, since it involves a car, can be a very expensive activity.

"I go cruising because it's fun, but it's also expensive for gas. Sometimes we use a whole tankful of gas," Quinn Brown said.

With the crackdown and the increasing price of gas, cruising would seem to be decreasing in popularity. But numbers show that it isn't.

"I like to get away on weekends with friends and have a fun time," Jana Miller said.

With that attitude, the activity that has kept teenagers busy on Saturday nights for years won't die, said one student.

Junior dreams of dance scholarship

Brigette Boyle got her start in dancing five years ago when a good friend inspired her to take lessons. She thought it sounded like a lot of fun, so she began taking ballet dance classes.

Brigette is now dancing at Profile for Dance in Mesa. She is most interested in dancing ballet and jazz. Originally she was interested in ballet, but as she progressed she became interested in jazz also.

Brigette's plans for the future include graduating on the four year plan. She plans to dance for about a year, then audition for the Mesa Civic Ballet. After she graduates from high school, she plans to attend Arizona State University for a year and then apply for a scholarship to the school of Performing Arts in New York.

Brigette says she would very much like to make a living of acting and dancing, hopefully on Broadway.

Sophomores plan second Coronation dance

The class of '84 planned and held many activities, including two dances, the fall dance and the second annual Coronation Dance on Feb. 13.

Led by Carol Goewey, Mary Ann Hull, Care McCray and Stephan Woodward, the sophomore class raised money through car washes, bake sales and in December they sold Santa Stockings filled with candy. They also donated the profits made on a bake sale to the United Way fund.

Campaigns were held and officers elected the previous spring. Holding offices were Tracy Walker, president; Vicki Lawrence, vice president; Merrilee Dertein, treasurer; Alice Davis, secretary; Dawn Veros, girls' representative and Nathan Gammage, boys' representative.

Hard work involved in paper

Sophomores were required again this year by the English department to write a research paper in their composition class.

This was the fifth year the papers have been required.

"It gives them a format for an organized essay that requires orderly documentation and enhances their writing skills," Marylee Fischer, English teacher, said about the paper.

The time involved to finish a research paper, according to Fischer, varies between four to eight weeks, depending upon the teacher.

Most sophomores do not like the tedious process of writing the paper, but many do find it valuable.

"I think it's fun because I'll be able to use the experience for the rest of my life," Heidi Farris said.

One of the main reasons for not wanting to do the assignment, according to one sophomore, is "it's hard."

Girl gets kicks out of sport

As a member of the sophomore class, Debbi Aguirre devotes much of her time to sports such as softball, basketball and volleyball. But one she pays special attention is to Shotokan Karate.

Debbi, who acquired her black belt in March has only once in 20 tournaments failed to place in the top three. At that tournament she had a broken hand and made it to the finals and placed fourth.

According to Debbi, at first it was just for fun. "But when I started competing, it became more of a sport. And after I placed in my first karate tournament, it really started coming."

She is learning the sport at the Mesa YMCA, and according to Stan Hirohata, her instructor, Debbi has "very good fighting spirit . . . just like a little tiger."

Frosh raise funds by sales, dance

Led by Marti Stoltenberg, the Freshman Class held fund raising activities and sponsored a dance.

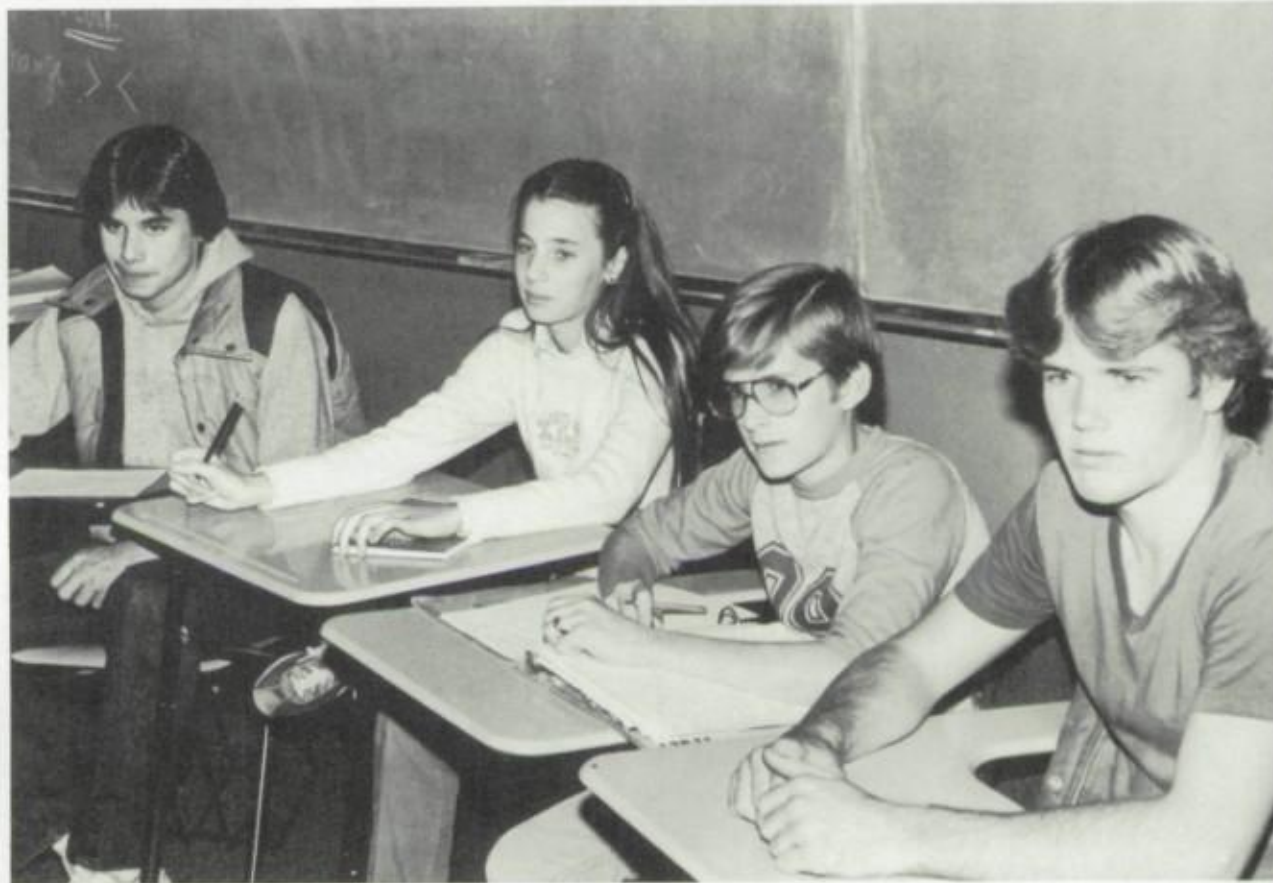

Helping Ms. Stoltenberg were Linda Dunn, Dave Brekke, Phil Mize and Mitch Gonzales.

In the fall, the class of '88 elected officers. Offices were held by Danny Ceballos, president; Chuck Kelly, vice president; Bryan Shields, secretary; Devin Breinholt, treasurer; Kim Harpham, girls' representative and Dominic Martinez, boys' representative.

Money was raised through activities including candy sales and cleaning the stadium.

Frosh survive pranks

Pranks such as elevator passes and tickets to the imaginary pool on the roof greeted many incoming freshmen.

As the frosh were initiated into high school life, they were introduced to pep rallies, class competition and upperclassmen.

The class of '85 soon learned that homework was a major part of school life. Dances, sports and clubs helped make school more enjoyable.

Opportunity was abundant as the frosh joined clubs, athletic teams and organizations to help them meet people with interests similar to their own.

If they lost their way around, they soon found out where to go by just asking a teacher, administrator or an upperclassman.

The freshmen found out that even though their class is the largest, the upperclassmen still played the same pranks as usual.

Boyett performs with family

Not everybody can fiddle around like Hayden Boyett.

According to Hayden, he has been playing the fiddle since he was nine years old.

"I have about 14 or 15 plaques and trophies, two belt buckles and a bunch of ribbons," Hayden said.

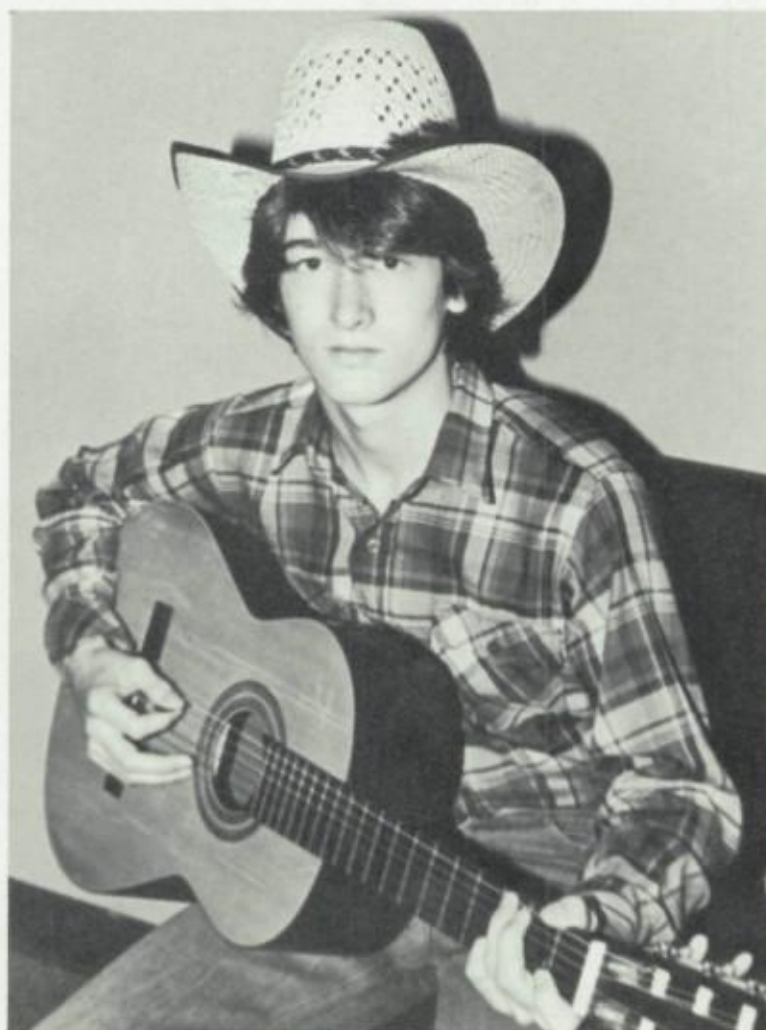

His older sister, Katrina, a junior, and the rest of his family band have traveled around the country to participate in contests, according to Hayden.

The first time he competed was at the age of 10 in Payson for a state contest but he didn't place, Hayden said.

His travels have taken him to Texas, Florida and in between for competitions like the Grand Masters.

The Boyette Family Band, according to Hayden, has performed everywhere from bars to Shriner conventions.

Coke machines located near the gyms are a popular place for refreshment.

Areas around Corona grew quickly this season as more housing developments went up and more people moved in.

With the increase in southern Tempe's population, new businesses appeared.

One area that grew rapidly was Ahwatukee.
Several businesses found their home in this community.

Plans for the new Pointe Resort nearby had many students looking forward to the employment and recreation it would offer.

Tempe, Mesa and Phoenix businesses supported Corona through donations and advertisements in its publications. Students in return used coupons and took advantage of other offers to return the support.

Some businesses, however, still hadn't moved closer to Corona. The nearest Taco Bell or McDonald's was still too far for many to drive to, eat lunch and drive back in time for their next class. Some students wondered when establishments such as these would make their move south.

Fiesta Mall and the surrounding theaters were still a favorite spot for entertainment. More students visited Old Town Tempe as the Mill Avenue shops were rebuilt and renovated in preparation for its conversion to a pedestrian mall.

Arizona's first lottery brought many people to local businesses to take their shot at winning a million dollars.
Although students were too young to legally buy tickets, many found ways to circumvent the law.

SPEND SOME TIME IN THE PAST.

*With best wishes to the Salt River Valley Water Users Assoc.
from Theodore Roosevelt*

On an hour's tour of Salt River Project's History Center, you'll be fascinated by the faces and events that pioneered the Salt River Valley.

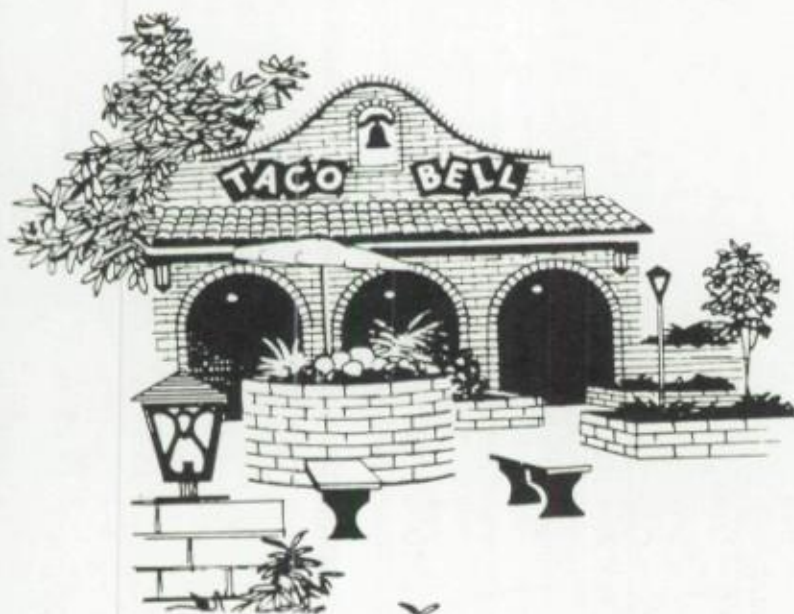

There are tools and artifacts from the mysterious Hohokam; rare photos of early pioneers; even original documents from Teddy Roosevelt's dedication of Roosevelt Dam in 1911.

Come share Arizona's history with us. The History Center is open weekdays from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Enter our main lobby, East Van Buren Street at Project Drive.

WHAT EVERY NOSE SHOULD KNOW!

Natural gas is one of your safest servants when properly used. But a gas leak can be disastrous. If you smell the odor of gas and can't locate and correct the trouble right away, call us immediately. There's no charge for gas leak investigations.

If you are not familiar with the odor of gas, call us and ask for a free gas "sniffer" card.

*Goodbye to you my trusted friend,
We've know each other since were nine or ten;
Together we've climbed hills and trees,
Learned of love and ABC's, skinned our hearts and skinned our knees.*

Activities create memories of fun seasons with friends

Memorable things were happening all the time. But as the seasons wore on, funny stories came tumbling out one by one.

Friday night games, favorite club activities and lunch outings that could set a new world's speed record kept students entertained. All the tales of freshmen fooled, disastrous weekends and the funniest joke they just heard provided plenty of laughter and talk around campus.

Good times were made better with good friends. Whether there was one particular "best friend" or so many that walking down the hall was one long succession of "hi's" and hurried plans to meet later, friends were unintentionally making memories of fun times.

"Juniors, Juniors, Juniors" is the cry led by Boys' representative Troy Landrum at a pep assembly. Simultaneously, other classes joined in the attempt to outyell everyone else.

Final exams, relationships give students rough times

Staying up late at night to finish a report that was put off day after day was one of the harder times students faced. Whether it was the light homework that could be delayed until break or the killer report or novel that demanded to be dealt with that night, homework was an inescapable, unpleasant task for many.

The frustration of asking someone out or waiting to be asked out became especially acute according to the season. The couple of weeks before Valentine's Day and the prom were hard to manage for hopeful students. Along with some rewards, these times were clouded with anxiety and rejection.

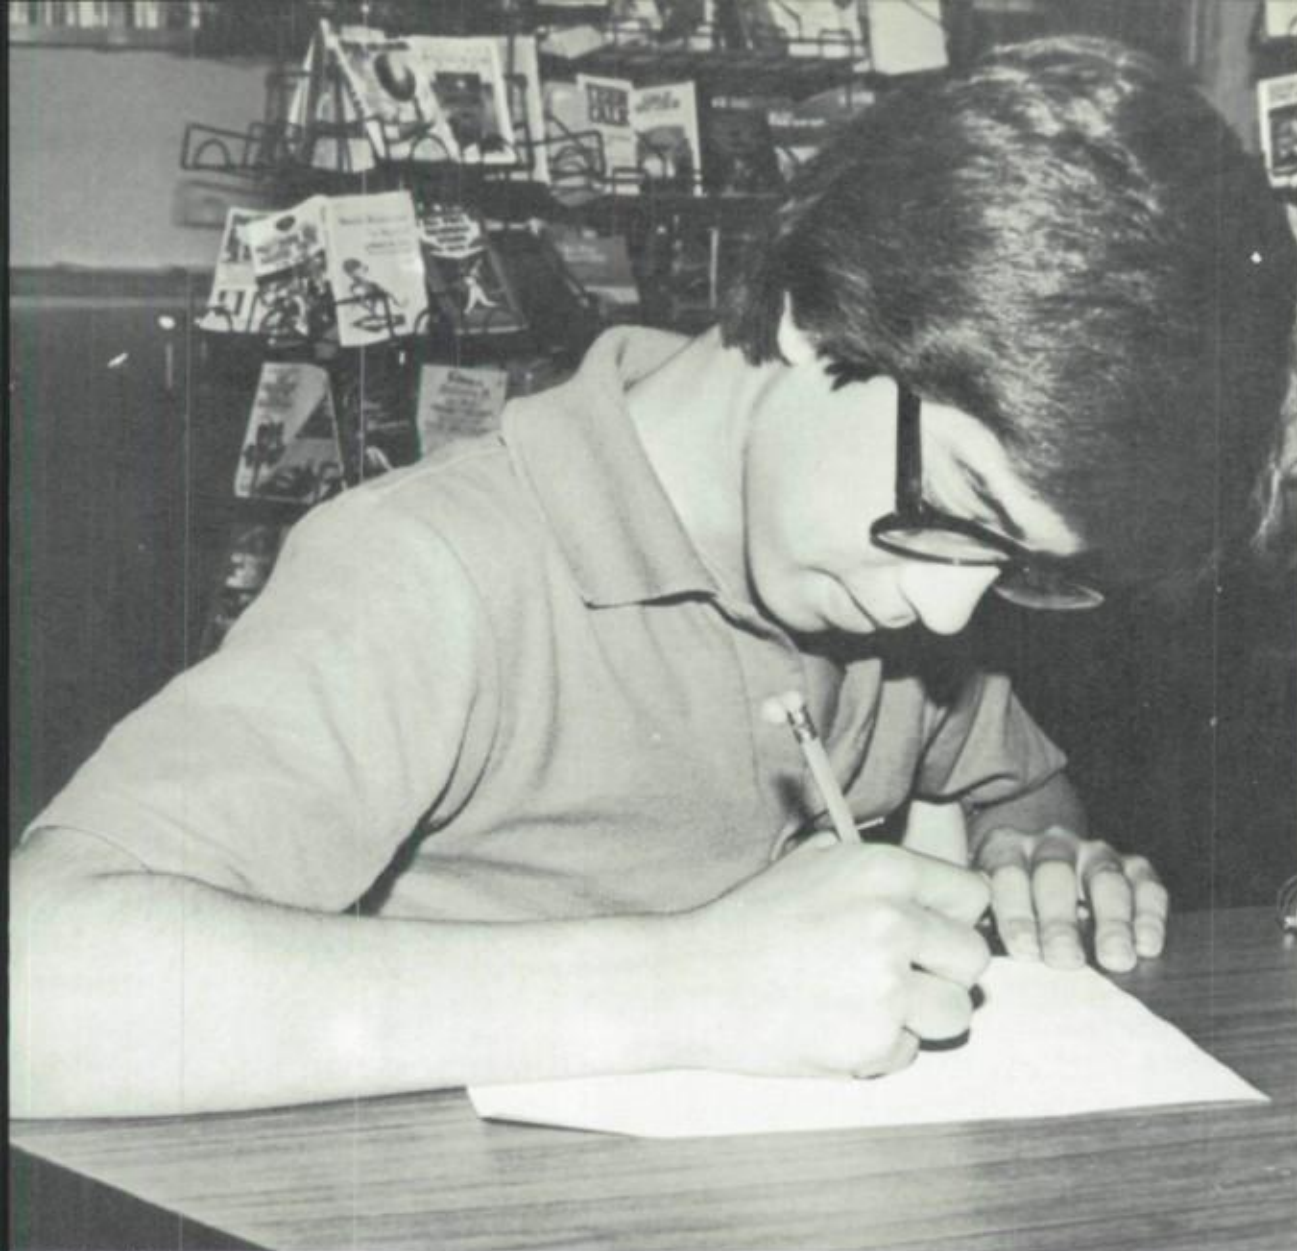

Two of the most uncomfortable times came at the end of each semester. Final exams created a stress all its own for most students. Notes had to be dug up and the time made to study them. The long hard tests taken one after another was one memory many students would rather not have.

Some juniors and seniors paid their fees and spent several hours struggling through the PSAT/NMSQT and SAT in preparation for college.

Students reach for honors, personal goals during year

In the fall it was Homecoming and the Senior Walk that rewarded students for their achievements. The Homecoming King and Queen were elected by their classmates and crowned during a football game. Top seniors were chosen in each department to take part in the senior walk where, as tradition dictates, the guy was honored with a kiss from the girl he was paired with after she received flowers from him.

New Year's resolutions were made when January began as students strived to better themselves. Bad habits promised to disappear and other aspects of personality were sworn to be upgraded.

In the spring, graduation was a much appreciated reward for seniors. Honor students stood out from the other graduates with gold tassels instead of orange and yellow ones.

Each season presented many opportunities to attain personal goals. For some, going to school was an accomplishment in itself. Others tried and tried for one grade higher on test after test, class after class. Many students' efforts paid off with a good report card or a pat on the back.

yearbook

Bob Muller advisor

TO: The Students of Corona del Sol
FROM: Karen Forbes, Editor
SUBJECT: 1982 SUNSET

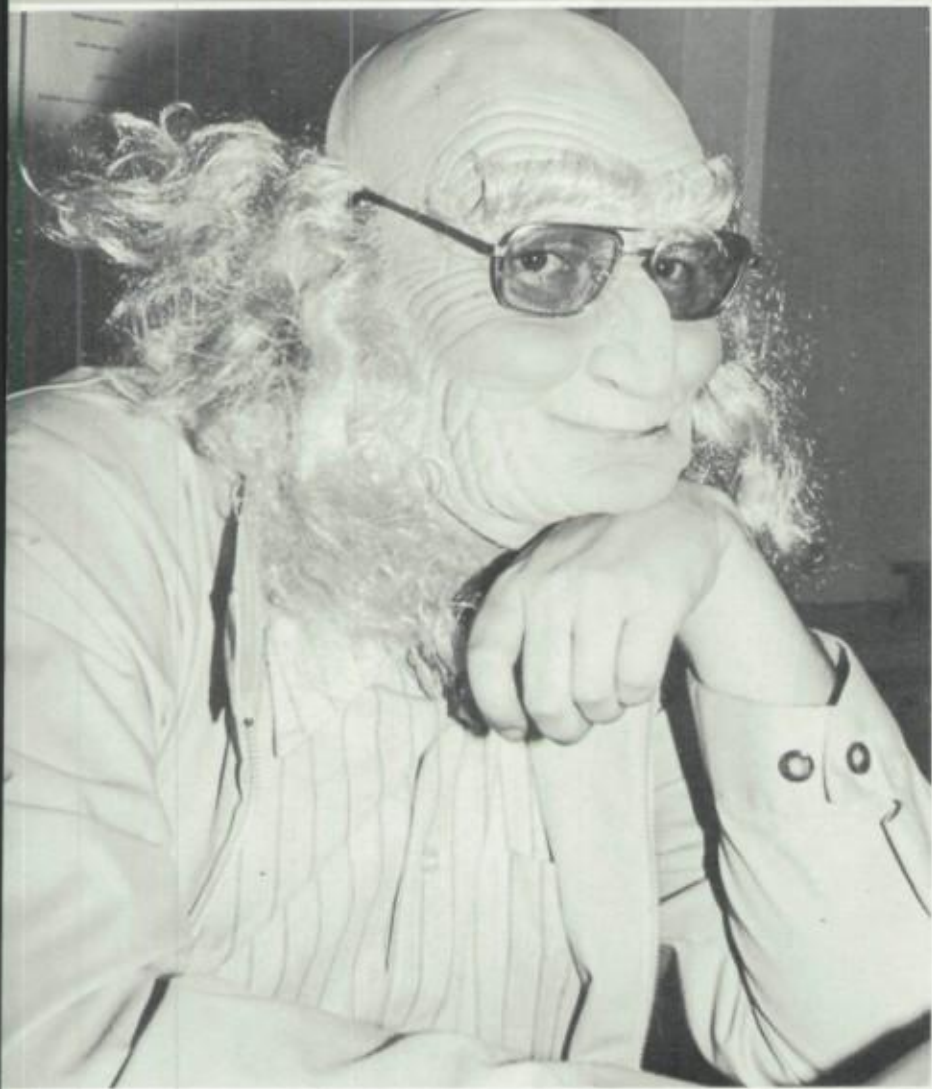

Six hundred years ago, a tribe of Indians called Aztecs measured their seasons with a sun calendar. In 1982 the Corona del Sol Aztecs did the same thing by different means, using a modern calendar and their ability to reminisce. "Seasons in the Sun" hopefully sparks the many memories of what you were and what you did during your season at Corona del Sol, a school named for the sun.

A large part of my season as editor was spent with the students who produced the '82 Sunset. Each staff member is appreciated for their extra time and effort in putting the many components of the yearbook together. Deadlines, problems and the other misfortunes that arose were made bearable by the jokes and fun times had during Saturday workdays and class hours.

A special thanks goes to our advisor, affectionately dubbed Dr. Ayatollah Shogun Muller or Dr. A for short. He saw us through it all with the patience, understanding and good humor of a friend.

Thanks are also due to our Newsfoto yearbook representative, Rich Hursh, for his help with ideas and technical information.

And finally, the students, faculty, administration and bookstore deserve a round of applause. Without them the '82 Sunset would just be 240 blank pages.
